Boat Capsizes; One Dead, One Missing

Fathers Lost In Rough Surf

A search of the beach area west of Daly City was called off yesterday for a missing San Francisco man swept overboard, when a 35-foot sailboat capsized about 6 p.m. Sunday.

The body of Robert Miller, 46, of Chico, owner of the boat, was found by officer Michael Scott some 150 yards south of where the "Juno" beached.

Miller tentatively was identified as a professor of economics at Chico State University.

Four other persons, including three children and a woman friend of the family, managed to swim through the pounding surf to shore.

The boat was enroute to Sausalito from Half Moon Bay, when it apparently was caught in heavy seas and capsized in the furf near Mussel Rock, police surmise.

Five hours after the boat turned over, Paul Miller, 11, and his brother, Jonathan, 9, staggered to a home at 49 Longview Drive, Daly City and asked for help.

The two boys had swam through the heavy surf and scaled a 225-foot cliff seeking help, police said.

At 11:21 p.m., firemen and police arrived at the scene and called for assistance from the Coast Guard.

A helicopter immediately was dispatched.

Search of the area failed to turn up the missing Gilles Rioux, 46, of San Francisco.

The woman aboard the stricken boat was Diane K. Dimon, 25, also of Chico.

She swam to shore carring nine-year-old Vincente Rioux, rescuers said.

The boy's father had carried him until he grew tired and Miss Dimon took over.

Witnesses last saw the elder Rioux floating on his back in the surf.

All survivors were treated for exposure at nearby hospitals, police said.

It was believed Rioux was a San Francisco architech with offices at 233 Post St.

'Huge Killer Wave'

A Survivor's Story Of Sea Tragedy

By FRANK LaPIERRE

The crew aboard the "Juno" had just finished dinner and was making excellent time from Half Moon Bay, where they had spent a sunny weekend, to its home port of Sausalito.

As they passed Pacifica, northbound, the 35-foot sloop suddenly encountered dense fog hugging the water.

Everywhere else it was a bright starry night.

The wind suddenly died, and without warning a huge "killer wave" struck, tossing the boat around like a cork in a pond.

Robert Miller, 46, skipper of the "Juno" yelled for everyone to brace themselves in case another wave struck.

Miller and architect Gilles Rioux were last seen alive on the starboard side of the boat, according to a story told police by one of the four survivors of the sea disaster.

As the crew braced itself, another, larger wave pounded through the fog, this time capsizing the boat and spilling the six occupants into the sea.

Shortly before dinner, everyone was wearing life jackets.

They had taken them off to "relax and enjoy" the trip, survivor Diane Dimon, 25, of Chico, told Daly City officer Michael Scott.

Scott was first on the scene and talked to Miss Dimon as she stood shivering and wet on the beach near the city's Mussel Rock garbage dump.

The boat had turned over about 150 yards from shore — close enough to get caught in the pounding surf in this area.

It was assumed both Miller and Rioux were the first to hit the water.

In quick succession, Miss Dimon, Vincente Rioux, 9, and Miller's two sons — Paul, 11, and Jonathan, 9 — were dumped into the raging water.

Scott said the tide was high at this time, but within an hour began dropping.

Vincente Rioux went into the water near his father.

He jumped back aboard the foundering ship to grab a life jacket, but slipped back into the water.

The child told police he last saw his father floating on his back.

"I realized my dad was dead," Vincente said.

Police theorize something struck Miller and Rioux rendering them unconscious. Perhaps a mst, or a piece of debris hit them.

Miller's body was found on the beach near the scene.

As Miss Dimon came ashore, she spotted Miller's body.

She started toward it, but turned and saw young Rioux lying face down in the sand.

Water surged over the child and he was being buried alive in the sand.

Already exhausted herself, she mustered enough strenght to crawl to his side and pull the child to higher ground.

The two Miller children struggled to shore.

After a brief rest they started climbing the 250 foot high cliff behind them to a row of homes they spotted high above.

After almost four hours of climbing they reached the home of Bonnie St. Andre at 49 Longview Drive, Daly City.

They did not know that less than 50 yards from where they came ashore was a roadway (Old Coast Highway One) through the dumpsite to homes in the area.

Scott said the fog rolling in at sea level in this area, while the rest of the community enjoyed either clear or high patchy fog "is certainly a mystery."

Sunday morning shortly after 9:30 a.m., the "Juno" left port bound for Sausalito.

Within eight hours the happy-go-lucky weekend had turned ugly, as the six crewmen and passengers fought for their lives.

The Coast Guard called off its search for the still missing Rioux Monday morning after a nightlong sea search.

Based on Per Capita Figures

DC's Low Operating Cost

Of San Mateo County's 19 cities, Daly City is the third lowest in per capita operating expenditures, according to a report issued by the Government Observer this month.

The "Observer," issued by the Governmental Research Council of San Mateo County, notes the two lowest cities in this category are Portola Valley and Millbrae based on 1972-73 data available.

Daly City's per capita figure to operate its city is $95.24 (some $6,705,145 total for the city).

The bayside city of Brisbane, on the other hand, spends $215.83 to provide city services to its residents, considerably more than most cities — except for Colma which spends $366.20 per citizen.

But Colma has no property tax rate and derives its revenues from County, State and Federal sources — about $790.93 per capita.

Unlike Colma (population 500) Brisbane, with a population six times larger, derives less than half that amount in revenue.

Daly City's total general revenue per capita is set at $123.09.

Another interesting comparison pointed out in the report is that Brisbane's assessed valuation is $6,054.75 per capita; while Daly City has a per capita assessed valuation of $2,124.59.

In other words, officials explain, Daly City is able to operate the county's second largest city at a lower cost to taxpayers than is Brisbane.

What happens to Brisbane if it should "take over" a development on San Bruno Mountain, is speculation based on available statistics.

Officially, there is little comment on the issue.

Daly City and Brisbane have been at odds over who will get control of the undeveloped mountain since the Local Agency Formation Commission (LAFCO) voted to put the unincorporated lands of the mountain under the sphere of influence of Brisbane — ignoring Daly City's pleas for the area.

If the speculation voiced by Daly City officials is correct, Brisbane will be hit even harder by per capita costs of adopting any mountain development.

This joint venture development between Crocker Land Company and AMFAC Corp. is expected to eventually house more than 20,000.

While Daly City could easily absorb such a development into its community of some 70,000, Brisbane would stagger under the financial impact, Daly City City Manager David Rowe points out.

Brisbane City manager Clark L. Smithson disputes not only statements voiced by Daly City regarding who best can provide services to San Bruno Mountain, but also the figures used as comparisons in the GRC report.

As an example he pointed out Colma, according to the report, spends $64 to care for its streets, Brisbane $22.20, and Daly City only $11.35.

"What they have failed to note is the fact we are maintaining streets that have no homes or businesses on them," Smithson said.

This is also true of Colma, he said.

"The report does not provide a valid comparison . . . to determine who is capable of handling the mountain," Smithson said.

He said his office is now evaluating the financial impact the mountain and Crocker Industrial Park might have on his city.

Smithson has been city manager of Brisbane two months.

"One of the first things I have asked for is more information concerning San Bruno Mountain," he said.

Board May Reverse Stand On Door-to-Door Selling

The Jefferson Elementary School Board of Trustees may reverse its recent stand against allowing children to participate in door to door fund raising projects.

The board indicated a change of heart at the Nov. 6 meeting after hearing the earnest pleas from some of the 20 students attending who told the trustees that the extra money raised was needed to provide for such items as uniforms for their cheerleaders and bands for dances.

A week before, the board voted 3-2 to deny requests for a Colma Intermediate school magazine sale and a Fernando Rivera candy sale.

Since official board policy now permits such fund raising activities, it was believed that the policy should be changed if the trustees now opposed these sales. Assistant Superintendent of Personnel and Instruction Dr. Vinton Stratton said at the time that the board was either rescinding an existing policy or perhaps pointing out the need to reconsider or rewrite it."

But after hearing from the school principals and children at the Nov. 6 meeting, it appeared that the three trustees who voted against the sales previously were reconsidering their positions. Board President Beverly Forrester admitted to the audience after the discussion that "I think you've influenced the board with your presentation."

The main objection to having the door to door sales was a fear for the children's safety and because some of the proceeds of these sales sometimes go to purchase things that the district should be paying for.

Trustee David Parker strongly expressed his opposition because of the safety factor, saying, "It gets down to whether you are concerned about the health and welfare of the child or are you concerned about how much money they can make."

The district policy prohibits after dark sales, but Parker contended that the children couldn't be controlled that well to assure that they would not go out at night.

Al Schwarzbach, who voted with James Cranna to allow the sales, said the fund raising activities were "a dimension of the child's education that shouldn't be denied." Schwarzbach felt that the sales were a benefit because it gave the student a part in helping the school.

As for the danger element, Schwarzbach said he would be the first one against door to door sales if the statistics proved out Parkers' fear, adding that the children are more exposed to injury playing intramural sports.

The trustees may consider tacking on some stipulations regarding supervision of children while selling and what the profits can be used for.

In another matter, the board unanimously adopted a resolution requesting the City Council to pass an ordinance restricting vendors to remain a certain distance from the schools an hour before and an hour after the school session.

The action developed from complaints that children from Franklin Roosevelt were crossing the street and thereby creating a safety problem to buy ice cream from a vendor stationed there.

Controversy: JESD Teacher Resigns

James Lowe, the Jefferson Elementary School District teacher arrested by police for allegedly contributing to the delinquency of a minor last month, has resigned.

The resignation, delivered by Lowe Saturday noon to school board president Mrs. Beverly Forrester, was accepted unanimously in a brief special meeting held Sunday.

It was reported the board had been attempting to find ways to oust Lowe since he and another man, Francisco Ernesto Valdez, 24, were booked Oct. 7, 1974 for sexual offenses involving two small children, ages 6 and 12.

The charges were dropped against the pair and later refiled in Northern San Mateo Judicial District Court.

Attempted Murder Charged

A San Francisco man was arrested and booked for attempted murder by police Sunday, after he allegedly beat and kicked a young woman at a Daly City street corner.

Police identified the man as Cleveland Scott, 24, of 1018 Fitzgerald St., San Francisco.

The victim was Camille Jones, about 22, police said. They would not give her address for fear of reprisal.

The incident occurred at the corner of Poncetta and South Mayfair Ave., about 4:30 p.m.

According to the victim, Scott had followed her car for several blocks before the alleged attack.

As her car approached the intersection, she reportedly spotted Westlake Security Guard James Myrick and asked for help.

Before police could arrive, Scott allegedly dragged the woman from her car and began punching and kicking her, Myrick told police.

Police said Scott was on probation for a similar attack against Miss Jones some eight months ago.

The victim said she knew Scott only as a "working acquaintance."

Libel Suit Filed by Principal

The principal of a Jefferson Elementary School District school in Daly City has filed a $250,000 damage suit in Superior Court charging that he was libeled and defamed by a teacher publication.

Peter Hansen, principal of the Ben Franklin School, asserts in the complaint that the "Teacher Advocate," the Jefferson Classroom Teachers' Association, and Lynn Ducken, Nancy Brolliear and James Cannon, identified as publishers of the Advocate, libeled him

Bite Worse Than Bark

"A family that fights together, bites together," to paraphrase an old saying.

At least that's the way two Daly City police officers feel today after being wounded in the line of duty — and elsewhere — while trying to meditate a family dispute earlier this week.

Officers Ernie DaRosa and Pete Salvi responded to a Hillcrest Avenue family fight.

While standing on the porch of the home talking to the woman owner, they reportedly observed a young man beating a girl inside.

Both officers went into the home to mediate the battle. It was later learned all were members of the same family.

Salvi grabbed the girl in an attempt to quiet her down.

DaRosa talked to the man. That's when a little white dog came running from somewhere, leaped into the air and sank his teeth into Salvi's derrier, causing him to divert his attention away from the man, according to Lt. Jim Barron.

The dog then unleashed his fury on DaRosa, biting him on the right ankle, Barron said.

About this time, a German Shephard dog came on the scene growling and barking.

He sized up both officers, but did not bite, they said.

The fight between the family broke up, and the dogs were curbed, police said.

Both officers were taken to Mary's Help Hospital for treatment.

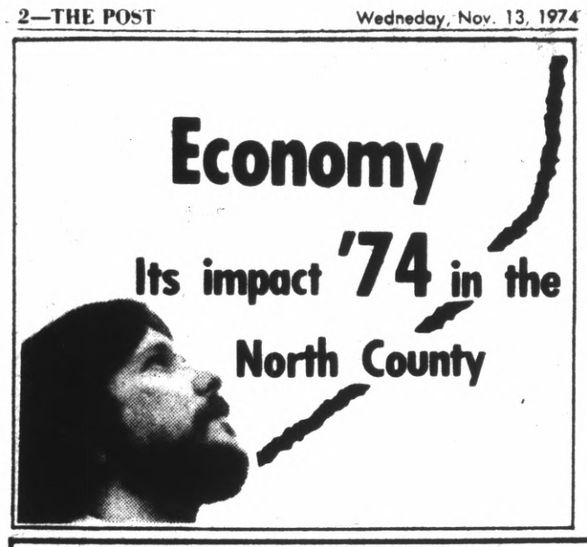
FIRST NATIONAL BANK Serving the Northern Peninsula



Where to Invest During Hard Times

By JACK BIK

Where does a person invest — when a dollar is worth less every day?

This is the problem that increasingly has been bedeviling local residents as the inflation rate climbs higher.

In the first place, according to the manager of one San Bruno local savings and loan firm, many persons who previously had been able to put away a little are now finding that they need every penny just to meet living expenses.

Particularly hard hit are those on fixed incomes.

Those who do have funds saved up are playing a new game. They are taking their money from one place and putting it in another place in order to obtain higher interest — hoping that won't slip back too much.

According to a spokesman for the Federal Reserve Bank in San Francisco, in spite of the many pay increases granted over the past year, the American people's "real disposable income" has still declined 3.2 per cent during the past year.

In this new game, the savings and loan firms — limited by law in the interest they can pay — have been losing customers. This is why there is so little money available for home loans.

The stock market is also suffering. While Dow-Jones averages may have fallen 40 per cent, many popular stocks have fallen to half or a third of their previous values, and some much more. Instead of hearing stories about how Jim's mechanic made $100,000 because he bought a new stock before everybody else did, the stories told in bars, lunchrooms and barbershops are now about how Joe lost his shirt in the market. Most victims, however, just aren't talking.

Instead of calling up their broker to buy 100 shares, many just sell out and look for something which, hopefully, will give a higher return.

Those scoring highest in this new game are those who have the most money to invest.

According to Norm Jenson, manager and vice-president of the San Bruno office of Bank of America, a popular investment today is something called "bankers' acceptances." These have been paying 11½ per cent to 8 per cent during the past year, and an investor can get his money back in six months. The only catch is an investor needs at least $25,000.

If an investor has $100,000, there is no limit on interest which can be paid by a bank or savings and loan, and one merely bargains with the institution's representative. Interest on such accounts had hit 11¾ per cent during this year, but recently has come down slightly.

An investment which has recently become popular for those with $10,000 has been treasury bills. Interest on these bills considered absolutely safe, has gone as high as 9 per cent, although it also has come down in recent months. Savings and loan institutions blame the treasury bills with their attracted interest rates, for the decline in deposits.

For the low income saver, certificates of deposit — with minimums ranging from $500 to $1,000 — have become increasingly popular. Interest on these range from 5¾ to 6½ per cent. Savings and loan firms and banks both offer these certificates.

in their search for higher interest rates, some savers have been putting their money into thrift institutions, paying as high as nine per cent, and in credit unions. The United Air Lines Credit Union is now offering 8 per cent interest. Some local investors even search out 10 per cent mortgages, which because of tight money are in big demand.

Are local residents moving their money from savings accounts into items which are likely to appreciate over the years?

There seems to be little evidence of such a trend yet on the Northern Peninsula.

A jeweler on San Mateo Avenue in San Bruno reports that business "has not really been too good" lately. A Granat Bros. Tanforan, executive notes that most customers have been buying on credit and appear to want jewelry more for the sheer pleasure it gives. However, he conceded that jewels, such as diamonds, have held their value and can be expected to go up in price.

Walter Castor of Castor's Coin Shop in San Bruno, reports that there is a growing business being done with persons who are not interested in coin collecting, but simply in the gold and silver the coins contain. One can buy a bag containing 100 Austrian gold kronas for $181. for instance.

However, he warned, there is risk involved.

He tells about a woman who came into his shop with 10 Mexican 50-peso gold pieces, which she purchased in a San Jose flea market for $2,650.

"They were counterfeit," he said. "They had gold plate over pot metal, and were worth only $3 apiece."

He added that "She was quite upset at the news."

Owning gold bullion becomes legal on Jan. 1, and Castor said he is considering selling it — "depending on the restrictions."

Those who may consider investing in valuable objects should heed Castor's caution, however: "The price of gold and silver can go down as well as up."

Some Prices Are Going Down

Not all prices are going up.

There is one area of our economy where the prices have been going down, down and down.

You would think that those people most affected by this exception to our all-pervading inflation would be overjoyed. Not at all, however. They are complaining every bit as much as those hit by higher prices.

We are referring, of course, to those who have been investing their money in stocks.

While the price of nearly everything has been going up at a record clip, stock prices have been falling just as steadily. Many local retired persons who have invested their savings in blue chip stocks — ironically, seeking a hedge against inflation — have glumly watched their net worth sinking by the day. Younger people who have invested in some of the glamorous go-go stocks, hoping to make a fortune, have seen their savings go up in smoke.

Among those expressing their discouragement have been members of local stock investment clubs.

One such northern San Mateo County club is the K-20 club, composed of about a dozen past and present members of the San Bruno-Millbrae Kiwanis Club.

Each member invests $20 a month in the club. They meet in a different member's house each month, and talk over which stocks to buy and sell.

"Our original idea," said one member," was to get a 20 per cent increase in our investment each year — doubling our money every five years."

Instead, the $17,866 they have invested since they got together six years ago, has resulted in a portfolio of stocks valued at just $10,926 today.

The club has been divided at each meeting between those who want to sell those stocks, which have been performing badly, and those who want to hold on to falling stocks because they believe they have not really lost any money until they sell such stocks — that their losses are really just "paper losses."

Some members have urged the club to declare a moratorium on further investment until "the market bottoms out."

However, Nick Elchinoff, a local attorney who is the group's secretary, thinks that now is the very time that investment clubs, as well as others, should be investing in stocks.

"When everybody else is running," he asserted, "the smart boys are buying."

Many stocks are now undervalued, he says. Their prices have fallen while the company's sales and profits have been rising. When the inevitable market turnaround comes, he asserts, the owners of such stocks, will be the lucky ones.

Nevertheless, the number of local clubs has declined by 25 per cent in the past year, says Gerry Henry, past president of the Bay Area Council of the National Association of Investment Clubs. There are still, however, some 600 clubs in the Bay Area.

"I never saw so many people scared," he admitted. Some people are even afraid to put their money in the bank."

Henry has been trying to forestall clubs from liquidating by trying to talk them into merely suspending their investing for a few months — then re-evaluating the stock market.

Brisbane Asks to Run Buses

Daly City Monday hedged on granting Brisbane permission to route buses through its city for at least 30 days — until it has had time to study ramifications of recently passed Proposition "A" dealing with a countywide transit system.

Brisbane City Manager Clark L. Smithson told the council his city had already purchased two new 12-18 passenger buses, and the city is anxious to get rolling on the system.

Smithson reminded Daly City councilmen and staff attending the meeting that "our City Council supported Proposition "A," and he hoped whatever transportation was initiated in Brisbane, the new transit district would one day absorb it.

Mayor McRobert Stewart ventured the nine member transit district board would be established within 3 months.

Stewart felt Brisbane's bus service "might be a little premature."

Brisbane wants to send its two buses through South San Francisco to the Greyhound Bus Depot there, and north to the city limits of Daly City and San Francisco on half-hour schedules.

There would be no pickups or dropoffs in Daly City, Smithson said.

If Brisbane cannot get permission from Daly City, he will run the buses only up to the city limits, Smithson said.

What the city manager fears is his city will lose part of the Metropolitan Transit Commission grants unless the buses are used.

Brisbane will use the same routes as outlined by the MTC, it was understood.

Councilman Paul Hupf said he felt there was "no particular reason why we shouldn't permit Brisbane to provide (bus) service to its own citizens."

But City Attorney Albert Polonsky asked the council for time to study the affects of Prop. "A" before proceeding further.

Pickett Likes County Post

By BOB HEMINGWAY

"I told Mr. Tarshes that as long as the supervisors are willing to put up with me I would give him four years . . ."

That was the statement of Dr. George Pickett on Nov. 17, 1970, when he met with the press following announcement of his appointment as San Mateo County's new director of health and welfare, succeeding the retired Dr. Harold D. Chope.

Pickett was the selection of County Manager M.D. Tarshes for the position.

The four years is up. And what is Pickett's position today concerning his post?

"I couldn't think of a better job," he said today.

Pickett says he has no intention of leaving.

"I like what I'm doing. I like the area. I like the department. I like the county," he stated.

San Mateo County is the "best government I ever worked for," Pickett said, "and I have worked for many at the county, state and federal level."

"There are so many things that need to be done, and that can be done, I don't want to walk away from them," he stated.

At the present time, Pickett is deeply involved in the preparation of a demonstration project to determine if the county can successfully operate a decentralized health care program for its indigent and low-income residents.

He contends that the county can more effectively deliver health care services to its residents by providing clinics in the north, central and south areas of the county and by contracting for in-patient hospital care district and private hospitals rather than concentrating services at the Health and Welfare Department in San Mateo and at Chope Community Hospital.

The decentralized health care plan has proven quite controversial. The demonstration plan, scheduled to begin in the south county area Jan. 1, will determine the success or failure.

Pickett intends to remain at the helm and see it through.

When he said four years ago that he would give Tarshes four years, Pickett hedged a little.

"I made no promises after that," he said at the time. "But that does not mean that my resignation will be on his desk four years from today. It is conceivable that I will be here for many more years than four."

Pickett still resides with his family (wife, Anne, sons, Alan, 7, and Vince, 5) in Belmont, where he purchased a home when he arrived in the county from Detroit, where he held the dual positions of public health director for the city and for Wayne County.

Described in a newspaper story at the time of his appointment as a "balding 35 with bushy brows and a thick mustache," Pickett can now be described as a balding 39 with bushy brows, but no mustache. He cut it off about a year after his appointment.

Brunan Stabbed, Robbed

A 27-year-old San Bruno man leaving a bar on Middlefield Road south of Redwood City Monday evening was attacked, stabbed in the abdomen and arm and robbed of more than $800, the sheriff's office reported this morning.

David G. McDonald, a maintenance inspector for United Airlines, of San Bruno, reported he had just cashed his payroll check and pulled more than $300 in currency from his pocket to pay for a drink at Mazzocco's Bar and Restaurant at 2808 Middlefield Road.

Taken were $333 in currency, a silver dollar valued at about $470 and three Fillipino 3-centavo pieces.

McDonald said he managed to struggle free and was able to get to his girlfriend's residence nearby She took him to Sequoia Hospital, where his wounds were sutured.

Resolution on S. Bruno Jail Adopted

North Cities to Apply for Federal Funds

North San Mateo County cities are expected to soon apply for part of the $2.5 million in federal funds earmarked for use in county-wide community development projects.

Except for Daly City, other North County cities must apply for their share of Development (HUD) monies becoming available to the county.

Because Daly City's population is over 50,000 it applied directly to HUD.

Cong. Leo J. Ryan told the North County Council of Cities meeting at Burlingame restaurant Thursday night that he favors the HUD program.

He recalled as a freshman congressman he helped to put the gears in motion that made the funding possible.

HUD funds under this program can be used for all community development projects, including parking lots, senior citizens' programs and housing for the elderly.

Presenting the program was James Jaquet, program manager for HUD in the San Francisco area, and Dan Roof, also of HUD.

In other action the North San Mateo County Council of Cities adopted a resolution asking State Sen. George Moscone for his support in getting San Francisco's jail out of San Mateo County.

The jail is located in San Bruno.

Asking for the resolution was South San Francisco Councilman Warren Steinkamp, who — as last year's mayor — had taken part in disucssions on closing the local jail.

Steinkamp had noted that a series of hearings Rep. Leo Ryan held last year in San Francisco had resulted in a committee being appointed to deal with the matter, headed by the Board of Supervisors chairmen of the two counties, Dianne Feinstein and Jean Fassler. Since then, however, no word has been heard from this committee.

Federal funds are available for construction of a new federal jail in San Francisco, and the state needs new construction, Steinkamp added. A joint facility of the three levels of government could result in many economies, he said.

"We may lose the federal money unless we move," he added. The resolution was also directed to Congressman Phil Burton, and his brother, Assemblyman John Burton.

'Restricted Education' Charged

Newly appointed board member Grady Hesters said Thursday night that students attending schools in the Laguna Salada School District with a low ethnic minority enrollment are getting a "very restricted education."

The 32-year-old Hesters claimed that schools with high white populations such as Vallemar, Ortega, Pedro Valley and Portola afforded the children a "very limited social experience" because of the near absence of minority students.

Hesters, who was sitting as an official voting member of the board for the first time since being appointed Oct. 3 to replace Anita Heyman, made his comments during a discussion of a racial and ethnic survey of the district's schools.

Board President Dale Buettgenback rebutted Hesters' remarks, saying that the schools should not have to solve the social ills of the world, but just educate. "I haven't seen one study that shows where you can improve education by busing students from one school to another," he said.

Buettgenback added that too much time is spent caring about the numbers in the survey than on the educational process itself.

The survey, which is required annually by the State Department of Education, listed the percentage of American Indians, Blacks, Asian Americans and Spanish surname students in the district's 15 schools. Vallemar had only a 7.8 per cent minority enrollment. Ortega 11.2, Pedro Valley 12.1 and Portola 13.9.

The heaviest minority population was at Westview, 52.7 per cent, and Fairmont, 36.2 per cent. The average minority enrollment in all the schools is 21.3 per cent.

On releasing these figures, Supt. James Brien noted that there was an increasing percentage of minority pupils at the northern end of the district. "This imbalance means that the district should begin to study the situation in order to determine what alternatives might be used to achieve a more equal balance," Brien said.

But Hesters turned that statement around, saying that Westview, with its nearly 50-50 racial balance, provided a more realistic view of what the world is really like than did Vallemar.

Hesters termed Vallemar a "ghetto school." He explained that when a school is 92 per cent black, it's called a ghetto school. "Vallemar's 92 per cent white now, and that's still a ghetto school."

Two of Hesters' children attend Vallemar.

Decision to Donate Land to SSF Delayed

Two major industrialists have not yet decided whether they will donate land they own for the South San Francisco Shoreline Park.

Representatives of U.S. Steel Corp and the Healy-Tibbits Co. have asked the city to hold over a hearing on the new park boundaries to Nov. 20.

Land owned by the two firms lies between Oyster Point and Bayshore Freeway. U.S. Steel is being asked to donate a 100-foot wide strip above the high tide line, and Healy-Tibbits is being asked for a 200-foot deep strip. The latter strip would be adjacent to the Oyster Point Marina, and the city would like to reserve it for possible marina expansion.

Representatives of the two firms appeared at Wednesday night's hearing on a revision at the city's general plan. The revision was necessitated by developer Cabot, Cabot & Forbes' application to the Bay Conservation and Development Commission for a trucking terminal on the site of the Shoreline Park.

The BCDC had refused to revise its bay plan to provide for the terminal until the city revised its general plan. The BCDC will hold its hearing on the problem on Dec. 5.

CC&F has already agreed to donate a 100-foot wide strip it owns along the shoreline.

Under state law, the BCDC controls development on the first 100 feet of the bay shoreline.

City Manager Ed Alario Wednesday night explained that the city's general plan had been drawn in 1969, when the future extent of fill was not known. The park shown on the map totals 139 acres, but much of it is under water. The new park deletes much of the original planned park, but includes more of the actual shoreline, both north and south of the Oyster Point Marina.

Under the new plan, public access easements must be worked out to all parts of the shoreline.

The general plan revision also includes the deletion of the Miller Avenue link. There are now two sections of Miller Avenue — one in old South San Francisco and the other in the Sunshine Garden neighborhood

The city proposes building a pedestrian path and bicycle road over the right of way to enable Sunshine Gardens youngsters to travel to Parkway Junior High and Sunshine Gardens School.

College of San Mateo's Library recently acquired its 100,000th volume, making it one of the half dozen community colleges in the nation with that many books.

The milestone was reached when Alvin Alexandre, instructor of journalism and president of the CSM Faculty Senate, presented a book, "Great Libraries," to John Dooley, head librarian.

CSM's Library had less than 30,000 volumes when it moved to its present site in 1963, according to Dooley.

Watch Those Rental Television Agreements

By LORENE BEASLEY
Editor of BBB Barometer

Some promotions of rental television and stereo sets or rental with option to buy, often directed toward the lower consumer.

Frequently the sales talk contains an explicit assurance that no credit check will be made, or that credit ratings are not important when, in fact, the transaction depends entirely upon the prospective customer's credit standing.

The deceptive system works like this: radio and television advertisements promote rental of television and stereo equipment by promising low payments, easy credit, free delivery, services and sometimes the guarantee that you can "rent-to-buy" at an inexpensive rate.

When the customer becomes interested in renting he is then informed that in addition to the minimal fee set forth in the ad, he must also pay the first week's or month's rent and a delivery charge.

He is urged to sign a rental agreement by the company's agent. Some agreements carry a clause that if the weekly or monthly payments are made for a specified period of time the renter will own the appliance.

In other agreements, there is no such clause, but an oral representation that the customer will own the appliance.

In other agreements, there is no sauch clause, but an oral representation that the customer will own the equipment is often made to the customer.

The consumer who is inducted to rent a television or stereo by deceptive advertising that implies the rental price to be low as compared to retail price of the product, often eventually pays considerably more than the prevailing trade area price for the same equipment. Also repair and other charges are often concealed in the highly inflated rental price.

Some companies allow or encourage consumers to miss payments early in the contract, but when the agreement is near completion and ownership of the merchandise is about to pass to the consumer, his set is repossessed because of a delinquent payment. He finds, too late that he cannot enforce the verbal contract assurance that the set will belong to him after the total price has been paid.

The Federal Trade Commission takes legal action against such firms using these techniques, but similar operations continually crop up — usually in the lower income urban areas.

Deal with known reliable firms.

Explosion Rocks Home In Pacifica

An explosion rocked a Pacifica home, Sunday morning causing an estimated $21,000 damage, according to Pacifica firemen.

Fire officials said William Trist, of 343 Charing Cross was siphoning gasoline from his car into a small container when the container overflowed spilling gasoline onto the garage floor.

The gas streamed toward a hot water heater and was ignited by the pilot light.

The resulting fire engulfed the garage and spread to the attic, the kitchen and the living room, before firemen were able to control it.

Trist, his wife and child escaped the burning house uninjured.

Health Care Critic Defends Report

By JOHN HORGAN

It didn't take Larry Sosowsky long to become the favorite whipping boy of the mental health establishment in San Mateo County.

After his critical report on the county's mental health program was made public in September, he was about as popular as a bad case of acne.

Mere mention of his name caused local officialdom to gag and blanch.

So, it was more than a little surprising to find Sosowsky, 23, right in the midst of some of those same folks Wednesday in San Mateo. Soswosky was indeed a sort of latter-day Daniel strolling blissfully into the lion's den.

He was appearing at a meeting of the county's Mental Health Advisory Board to answer questions about his controversial study, a report which took the county to task.

For the most part, Sosowsky held his own as he confronted some of the very people who had bitterly attacked his report several weeks ago.

Methodically and unemotionally, he reviewed his data for the board members and audience. He explained how and why he chose to examine this county's mental health program. He did soil, he said, because the county has a national reputation in the field of community mental health services.

Ironically, he pointed out repeatedly that his purpose in doing the research was to find out whether or not the state as a whole has been operating on some invalid assumptions regarding the phasing out of its large mental hospitals.

He said the study was intended to shed needed light on what phenomenon, not to cast this county in the particularly grim role of bureaucratic fallguy.

He emphasized that, with the closing of the state hospitals and the subsequent emphasis on local treatment, the issue of violence and the former mental patient has tended to be glossed over. How are the counties handling the business of violence and the former mental patient, Sosowsky wanted to know. Is the new system working? Apparently not.

According to his figures, the rate of violence for the former mental patient is far higher than that of the general populace. Data released by the State Department of Health indicate that the rate for the mental patient (or former mental patient) is seven times that of the general citizenry.

In addition, Sosowsky found that more than half of the former mental patients released back into this community did not receive follow-up treatment from the county's Mental Health Services Division. Ananalysis by officials of the division later showed that as many as 32 per cent of such persons either did not get care or may not have. They could not be certain.

Soswosky's efforts were scored by local officials when they were first released for public consumption. Dr. John Visher ripped the report as being "a very juvenile effort." Visher, chief of the mental health division, said at that time that, "There is not a single test of statistical significance in the entire study."

County mental health officials went to great lengths to try to disprove Sosowsky's ten-month study. At Wednesday's meeting, several members of the advisory board raised critical questions but Soswosky fielded those with relative ease. He pointed out several times that the report was not intended to be an attack on this county's program at all. Said the author, "I'm looking at a law and a state policy which is apparently not preventing mental illness. I'm saying you ought to be aware of this situation."

Soswosky, who said later that the county went to some lengths to try to discredit his work earlier this year but failed, got support for his presentation from members of the audience.

(Related Story Page 22)

Several persons spoke up to laud the young man for providing some new insights into a statewide condition which is still unsettled. The Rev. Robert Fraser of the Unitarian Fellowship of San Mateo told the board members, "You are being too defensive. This man is not pointing the finger at this county. This study ought to be valuable ammunition for you in the future."

Dr. Murray Bilmes of San Mateo, an official at Peninsula Hospital's mental health facility, thanked Sosowsky for "questioning some of the premises" that the bureaucracy labors under. Said Bilmes, "this can be very helpful."

Others in the audience, particularly parents of adult schizophrenics said Sosowsky was providing a service that ought to be taken advantage of.

In all, Sosowsky, surrounded by critics, spoke for more than an hour.

Why did he bother to return here when he must have known what sort of reception was waiting for him?

"Why not?" he replied. Actually, during the period of his research, he had been asked to present his findings to the advisory board. He indicated then that he would. In a sense, he was fulfilling that primise Wednesday.

However, the county made a serious effort to undercut the report weeks ago. According to Sosowsky, the county had tried to have a local mental health official be allowed to sit on a committee at the University of California which passed on the merits of his study, a thesis produced for the school's Department of Public Policy. UC refused, Sosowsky said.

After the report was made public in September in Sacramento, one local mental health official urged that the county consider legal action against the author and he further alleged that Sosowsky's thesis was in jeopardy at Cal because of what he termed the student's questionable methods. He said Sosowsky might not get his degree as a result. He strongly implied that the whole academic quality of the report was in serious doubt at the highest levels at the university.

Sosowsky dispelled all of those notions Wednesday. He said that, far from being of dubious scholastic value, the thesis has actually drawn a good deal of acclaim, regardless of what local mental health spokesmen believe.

He said the study was approved by U.C. authorities. He has obtained his master's degree and at least four other states are interested in his findings, he added.

Sosowsky noted that he even contacted the county prior to public release of the document to inform them of its completion. That occurred late in the summer. "I never heard from them again," Sosowsky said.

Although several members of the advisory board expressed their appreciation privately to Sosowsky for his Wednesday appearance before them, he and Dr. Fisher never exchanged as much as a single syllable during the meeting.

2,000 Sign SSF Recall Petition

Ron Acosta, president of the South San Francisco Vigilant Voters Committee, presented a 2,011-name "intent to recall" petition to the city council Wednesday night.

It was directed against the four councilmen who had voted to create a non-profit corporation to finance construction of a fire-police complex — after a $4½ million bond issue for the project had lost at the polls on June 4.

Named were Mayor Terry Mirri, and councilmen Frank Mammini, Warren Steinkamp and Richard Battaglia. Councilman Leo Padreddii had cast the lone "no" vote against forming the corporation.

The petitions bear no legal status but are designed to be advisory. The petition stated that "the undersigned residents of South San Francisco would now favor a petition to recall councilmen."

"People just don't understand how four men can strike their vote and cast a vote to override a constitutional act," Acosta declared. "Your action of July 15 was contrary to statements made to me as president of the Vigilant Voters Committee when I appeared before this body on May 20."

Acosta said that he told the council that according to rumors, the Public Safety Complex would be built regardless of vote. He claimed that Mirri replied that the vote and the complex were synonymous.

"This statement was taken to mean that the outcome of the election was to be the deciding factor and if the proposition did not receive the required vote,the complex would be dropped," Acosta charged.

He added that the lease-purchase agreement, with non-profit corporation, would result in the complex being paid for from the city budget.

"Statement can be attributed to Mayor Mirri," he said, "that the city would have to tighten its belt and perhaps to cut some city services."

Acosta said that the "intent to recall" petition was the least of three evils, taken "in order to show respect and confidence in our City Council." The other two were to have enjoined the city by legal action, and actually to recall the four councilmen.

"Place this issue before the people of South San Francisco for another vote," he appealed, "and guarantee the people the right of voting or suffer the consequences of public sentiment at the next City Council election."

Vice-Mayor Dick Battaglia replied that "almost 64 per cent of the voters indicated their approval of the complex," showing that a heavy majority favored construction of the complex.

In addition, the council has an obligation to plan for the future protection of citizens and property. After a great deal of thought, he said, he concluded that "the least expensive way available was the lease-purchase arrangement."

None of the other councilmen replied. Mirri was not present at the meeting; he is serving in the National Guard this week.

A slashing attack on the petitions came during audience discussion from Allan Weinberg of Sunshine Gardens. He challenged the leaders in the VVC to promise that they would not run against the four councilmen in any recall election. He also challenged the petitions' validity as an expression of opinion, pointing out that no record was kept of those who refused to sign the petition.

He also warned that under the newly adopted state proposition on recalls, recall targets who survive the election can get reimbursed for their expenses of election.

SSF Man Killed

Ruben Romero, 49, a resident of Treasure Island Trailer Park in South San Francisco, died 2½ hours after being struck by a car, near his home, Wednesday night.

According to police, Romero was crossing Hickey Boulevard, at El Camino Real, when struck by the car operated by Jack Morris Epstein, 87, 470 Beech Ave., San Bruno.

Epstein was making a right turn from Hickey onto El Camino Real, police said.

Romero was rushed to Kaiser Hospital in South San Francisco for emergency treatment, then transferred to Kaiser Hospital in Redwood City, where he died at 11:30 p.m.

According to police, the exact cause of death is unknown today, and the case is under investigation.

No charges were filed against Epstein.

Program Effectiveness

Alcoholism Survey Revived

The San Mateo County Board of Supervisors has agreed to reconsider its action of last month in rejecting a survey on the effectiveness of various programs for alcoholics in the county.

In response to appeals by County Director of Health and Welfare Dr. George Pickett and by Donald R. Hales, president of the San Mateo County Medical Society, the board voted three to one to reconsider the matter at its Nov. 19 meeting.

In a letter to the board, Hales said that it is estimated that possibly up to 10 per cent of the county's population may be directly or indirectly affected by problems resulting from alcoholism.

"Yet our information about the extent and type of alcohol problems in this county is very sketchy, clouded by myth and stigma," he wrote.

"Only through such an approach as is embodied in this survey can we begin to get the type of information needed to thoughtfully plan and develop programs that meet the needs of the people . . .," Hales said in his letter.

What derailed the survey when the matter came before the board Oct. 8 was the failure to secure a four-fifths vote of the supervisors to transfer $7,256 from the county general fund to the survey program to pay the county's 10 per cent cost of the project.

The 90 per cent balance would be financed by the state's Office of Alcohol Program Management.

Supervisor Robert St. Clair questioned the effectiveness of a survey, also maintaining that it would be delving into the social activities of county residents. He voted against reopening the matter.

Donald Light, coordinator of the County Alcoholism Advisory Board, said the intent of the survey would be in three phases — one of the general public, a second of persons who have recently received treatment for alcohol related problems, and the third of representatives of the community and of organizations providing services to people with alcohol-related problems.

In his appeal, Pickett noted that some $1.1 million is being spent annually in the county on various alcoholism programs.

There are planned services for five distinct groups, he reported — the youthful problem drinker, the employed problem drinker, the hidden problem drinker, alcoholism among minority population groups, and the deteriorated alcoholic.

The concern, Pickett said, is "our lack of knowledge about the actual size and geographic distribution of these population sub-groups."

The survey, which will be done by an expert from the University of California, Berkeley, could develop "accurate and sophisticated information as well as develop techniques for continued monitoring of these population groups," he related.

Massive School Tax Load Seen

State Supt. of Public Instruction Wilson Riles said Friday that a 25-member special committee on school finances will ask the State Board of Education next week to begin the process of raising a billion dollars more in property taxes for the public schools.

The committee action will be the first in a series of moves to implement a 1971 California Supreme Court decision that ruled that the state had to find some way of equalizing the amount of money spent on children in California's public schools.

The committee's plan, Riles revealed, calls for spending at least $1,150 in state funds on each elementary school aged child and $1,300 on each junior or senior high school-aged child regardless of where the child lives.

Such an expenditure would call for $1 billion more in state expenditure on education than is now spent, with current state averages per child set at $867 elementary and $1,115 high school.

In San Mateo County, where district school expenditures already equal or exceed the state goal, experts feel that money would be siphoned off to the state and possibly educational facilities diminished unless more taxes are added to make up the difference.

One factor that usually affects any comparison of state averages against local costs, when salaries are a major item, is the cost-of-living factor in the area.

The final action on the matter will be by the state legislature and the governor.

Riles said he will support the statewide property tax aspect of the committee plan only if the revenue is earmarked solely for implementing the 1971 Serrano-Priest school finance decision.

Essentially, the property tax plan calls for raising taxes $4 per $100 for state expenditures. Where local districts are now raising that amount, the state would take the tax and then return the money to the district according to the formula of $1,150 per elementary and $1,300 per high school child.

In San Francisco, where there is approximately a $4 tax per $100 valuation for schools, it was estimated that the state would collect $130 million and return to the city only $89.5 million. If the city wished to continue spending its current rate of $1,750 per child, the district would have to increase the tax by $2 per hundred more — thus taxing at $6 per hundred to get the same education it is giving now, one source said.

North County Election Results

School Measures Fail; Prop A Wins—Barely

Bonds Defeated

Public school finance measures went down in flames Tuesday the length of San Mateo County.

The only education finance issue which passed was in Pacifica where the electorate voted to spend $550,000 to build a cover and swimming pool at Oceana High School and lighjlted tennis courts for Terra Nova High School.

Every other education money issue failed as voters turned out in strength to disapprove school spending.

In all, eight fiscal measures were defeated in Tuesday's general election.

In the San Mateo Union High School District, a revenue increase was voted down resoundingly. The district had been seeking a per student hike of $600 per child with $200 of it to be used in 1975-76.

"I would recommend that the district go to the public again in March," Evelyn Grant, president of the board of trustees, said this morning.

"I think it's absolutely necessary to go again with this. The size of the loss indicates that many people didn't realize that there is no other way for us to go. Nothing is going to rescue us. The next campaign will have to be more intensive."

Similar revenue requests were defeated in the Sequoia Union High School District, the South San Francisco Unified School District, and the Bayshore School District.

Sequoia had been seeking $525 per student. South San Francisco $96 and Bayshore $300. All three may go to the exercise all over again in March.

In Brisbane, the superintendent of the Bayshore district, Guido Colla, said he will ask his board to authorize another attempt in March. He said he might recommend that less money be requested. On Tuesday, the proposition failed by nearly a two-to-one margin.

In South San Francisco, there is a movement to place that measure on the March ballot. Trustee Thomas Henkle sid such a decision is mandatory. According to board President John Dillon, the thought of beginning to plan for serious economies "gives me nightmares."

Henkle said the campaign to get the measure passed was organized too late. He added that the campaign was not blunt enough to get across the message of potential crisis.

Transit District OK'd

San Mateo County voters apparently believing in the need for alternative means to the automobile for transportation, approved formation of a county transit district by a narrow margin in Tuesday's general election.

The vote for passage of Proposition A was 79,459 "Yes" to 76,272 "no." An affirmative vote of 51 per cent.

Many voters may have been confused or not interested in the transit proposal, since 31,292 of the 187,020 who went to the polls did not vote on the measure.

Mrs. Jean Fassler, chairwoman of the County Board of Supervisors, which was instrumental in securing legislation to place the transit proposal on the ballot, happily applauded the outcome.

"Because of the fuel, pollution and other related problems, the people have expressed their concern and have indicated their desire that we should proceed to develop a good transportation plan to put aside these concerns." Mrs. Fassler said.

"It is encouraging to see that the voters have recognized the problems," she added.

County Manager M.D. Tarshes stated he was "pleased to see Propostion A carry because we certainly need every opportunity to find alternative means of transportation to the automobile in the county as a means of saving energy and protecting the environment."

Tarshes said he was happy to see the judgment of the Board of Supervisors in putting the measure on the ballot vindicated by the people.

Supervisor Robert St. Clair, acknowledging there was a "great deal of confusion" over the complicated measure," said passage of Proposition A "gives the county the ability to come out with alternative plans (for a transportation system) and let the people decide what direction they want to go."

Back to Congress

Leo J. Ryan, the Democratic representative of the 11th District spanning from San Mateo to Daly City, easily outdistanced Brainerd G. Merdinger of South San Francisco to win his second term, 102,278 to 29,112 in Tuesday's general election.

Ryan, calling himself a "regular Democrat, not a liberal Southerner," said results nationwide indicated "the real possibility to get tax reform over Wilbur Mills (chairman f the House Ways and Means Committee) body whether he likes it or not."

Ryan, who was a state assemblyman for 10 years before he defeated Charles Chase in 1972 election for Congress, said the Democratic wave also could "force the Pentagon to make a far better and more realistic assessment of what the needs are, and a limit of our expenses to that."

While noting he had an easy campaign, Ryan said, "It's important to point out that I did not sit still. I was out ringing doorbells and walking sidewalks; the real reason I win big is because I get out and hustle.

Leo Ryan

Lambertson Elected

There are some new faces on school boards in North San Mateo County.

In the San Mateo Union High School District, Carol Gonella, in her second attempt at winning a seat on that board of trustees this year, captured an open position with ease.

In the South San Francisco Unified School District, Valerie Lambertson won in a landslide.

In the Burlingame School District — in what was perhaps the most bitterly contested of the three races — Dr. Donald Kay scored a relatively easy victory.

That race become hotter as the campaign drew to a close early this week. Kay ran against Ruth Jacobs and the battle lines were drawn over philosophy.

For the first time, the Burlingame tea$lchers actively and officially endorsed a candidate; Kay. They were outspokenly opposed to Mrs. Jacobs, who espoused tight budgets, fundamental studies, and a pragmatic look at what she felt is the sort of fiscal jeopardy the district will probably find itself in shortly.

Kay's campaign workers, relying on a large organization and the assistance of the teachers, saturated the community last weekend.

Said Kay after his victory, "Our people knocked on just about every door in Burlingame. That kind of dedication to the education of children made the difference."

Valerie Lambertson

MRS. GONELLA, a San Mateo attorney, beat two male candidates for a seat on the San Mateo Union High School District board and she thus becomes the fourth woman on this board.

She takes her seat at the same time the district has lost an important revenue increase measure. "I think we'll have to try for that increase again, as soon as possible," she said this morning.

"We are going to have to make cuts too," she added. It is to her belief that the dismal economic picture helped to contribute to the defeat of the measure too.

Is she happy about coming aboard when the district is apparently facing a fiscal calamity?

"I have a vested interest in all this," she offered. "I have children and I don't plan to move out of this area. This part of the country is my home. It's that important."

In South San Francisco, Mrs. Lamberton said she will ask for revival of a citizens committee to study the district's financial situation in light of the defeat of a revenue increase there.

She becomes the only woman on the North County board. Her candidacy was endorsed by the California Teachers Association, the San Mateo Labor Council's Committee on Political Education (COPE) and other community groups.

She conducted an intensive community campaign which included a great deal of door-to-door contact. She ran against four other candidates.

Moscone, Papan Win

Democrat George Moscone crushed two opponents to win re-election in the Sixth Senatorial District, while incumbent Assemblyman Louis Papan defeated Burlingame GOP Challenger Gilbert Rodli.

Mscone scored 54,527 votes and Republican Max Woods tallied 11,786.

Papan overwhelmed his opponent by a huge 45,034 to 20,574 margin.

Rodli officially conceded as he left his Black Angus Restaurant victory headquarters in San Mateo shortly after 10 p.m. Tuesday.

Rodli said he was "very disappointed" in the outcome. He said he expected the race to be much closer, although he was gratified with the support he received from the "intensive door-to-door work."

Winner Papan, successful in his first re-election effort, said the statewide Democratic sweep will lead to "equalizing the tax burden.

SM Man Killed When Greenhouse Collapses

An elderly San Mateo man died Saturday afternoon of massive head injuries after the roof of an abandoned greenhouse collapsed on him, San Bruno police report.

Pronounced dead on arrival at Peninsula Hospital in Burlingame was George Brown, 65, of 29 South Quebec.

According to San Bruno police, Brown and his son James drove to the abandoned greenhouses on Sneath Lane in San Bruno to collect wood and other materials in and around the old nursery, once owned by Avinsio and Mortenson.

The nursery site and greenhouse recently were purchased by Lincoln Properties, currently constructing apartments and office buildings on the site.

The developer has torn down several greenhouses but, according to police, about six greenhouses still remain on the site, and the developer has allowed local residents to take whatever they want from the structures before they are demolished.

For the past several months, many persons have rummaged through the greenhouses, walking away with building materials.

Police said on Saturday Brown and his son were collecting such materials, ripping side boards off one of the greenhouses and apparently sawing the roof supports, when the roof started to sway and came tumbling down.

According to police, both men noticed the roof teetering and ran to the exit, but only the son escaped.

Police said Lincoln Properties has closed off the area to scavengers.

High Speed Chase

Auto Thief Escapes Policemen

A thief stole an auto in San Bruno this morning, fled from pursuing police southward on Bayshore Freeway at speeds exceeding 100 miles per hour, and then crashed into a ditch at the Ralston Avenue offramp in Belmont.

The suspect then leaped from the battered stolen car and fled into the early morning darkness.

The dramatic chase began about 6 a.m. when Bert Yarnell of San Bruno pulled his 1963 white Thunderbird up to a news stand on a downtown San Bruno street.

As Yarnell got out of his auto to fetch a newspaper, a young black man about six feet tall, 155 pounds, wearing a dark coat and trousers and a floppy blue hat, suddenly jumped into the car and drove away.

Yarnell called San Bruno police who issued a countywide broadcast of the stolen auto.

Burlingame Policeman Thomas Marriscolo heard the broadcast and took up his position alongside the freeway near the Broadway overpass. Seconds later a white Thunderbird came speeding by.

Officer Marriscolo gave chase at speeds that he said reached 140 miles per hour. The auto thief at one point attempted to evade a growing battery of pursuing patrolmen by whipping off the freeway at the Nineteenth Avenue offramp and then pulling his speeding stolen auto back onto the freeway.

The high-speed chase involved numerous police vehicles. With their sirens blaring and red lights flashing, they startled early morning commuters.

Meanwhile, the thief skidded off the freeway once again at Ralston Avenue. His auto slid off the offramp roadway and crashed into a ditch, completely destroying the vehicle.

The suspect then jumped out of the battered auto and fled on foot. Marriscolo suffered a bruised knee jumping from his patrol car to chase the thief, whom police believe was injured in the crash.

Police with search dogs made an extensive search of the area, but were unable to locate the suspect.

Snags in S. Pacific Upgrade

There are some serious problems involved in any attempt to make Southern Pacific's commute service into a transit system.

According to a report given to the Metropolitan Transportation Commission last week, any attempt to upgrade SP's passenger service would be extremely expensive.

Here are some of the proposals contained in the Southern Pacific Upgrading Feasibility Study:

—Transport Peninsula riders into Daly City to allow them to transfer onto BART. Renovations of a spur track from San Bruno to Daly City would cost an estimated $11 million.

Extend the SP tracks from Third and Townsend in San Francisco to the East Bay Terminal. Passengers could then transfer to buses headed for Marin County or the East Bay. The estimated cost would be $30 million.

—Establish a station across from the San Francisco International Airport. Passengers could then take a shuttle bus to the airport.

The study indicates that all of these options would require improvement of SP's tracks on the Peninsula and modernization of its rolling stock. The cost of all that would be about $53 million.

Eric Mohr, project director, stated that even those measures would not be satisfactory because "you can't mix freight and passengers for frequency of trains."

The study also says that freight service could be separated from passenger service but the cost would be a whopping $500 million. Still, such a move would double the present capacity, from 20,000 rides to perhaps 50,000.

Guilty Plea In Stabbing

Edward J. Schilz, 32-year-old Daly City man accused of stabbing another man to death in Schilz's apartment Aug. 18, pleaded guilty to a charge of voluntary manslaughter Thursday in Superior Court at Redwood City.

Schilz is accused of killing Gordon H. Begeman, 52, a San Francisco book salesman. The coroner's office reported that Begeman had 15 stab wounds on his body.

Police went to the apartment Aug. 19 after receiving an anonymous telephone call and found Begeman dead on a bed. They said Schilz was sitting nearby smoking a cigarette.

Demise of School Revenue Measures

'The Old Days Are Gone Forever'

By JOHN HORGAN

Much to the chagrin of local public school officials, the voters of San Mateo County spoke their collective minds Tuesday. For those who run the county's various school districts, the results were not encouraging.

Six districts sought revenue increases from the electorate. All six failed, most of them by whoppingly large margins. In the Bay Area generally, 18 suburban districts sought such increases. Only two — in Santa Clara County — barely succeeded. The box score throughout the region was bearish.

Affluent districts are hurting these days because state law, inflation and declining enrollments have ganged up on them to produce a massive monetary crunch. The only way such districts can increase their expenditures per child is by going to the electorate. They did so Tuesday to no avail.

Still, there is an air of unreality pervading the education scene in these parts.

The election — the pre-election period and the aftermath — brought home how vaguely the whole fiscal situation is perceived here.

Almost without exception, the campaigns to get the revenue increases approved were bland. There was little attempt to get specific as to what would occur if the measures failed. Would a school close? Would after-school sports be abolished? There was very little, if any, discussion about such anticipated calamities. So, it is small wonder that the voters responded as they did, particularly when they are concerned about their own bouts with tax bills, inflation and possible unemployment.

In some districts, even the teachers refused to galvanize into action to support their tax measures. What makes that ironic is that, of all the groups who stand to lose at budget time in the event of further fiscal woes, the teachers are in the forefront.

One local administrator moaned after the election that many of his instructors still believe that all of this depressing news will somehow go away, that many of the negative predictions are the result of an administrative ploy to hide funds in obscure reserves and to generally play nefarious games with the staff.

"It has gotten to the point where I just don't believe that our people really understand the stakes involved here," he said.

Perhaps the best example of the lack of information which abounds here occurred this week in Burlingame. There, many teachers desperately flocked to the banner of a candidate for the Burlingame School District board of trustees. They apparently believe that Dr. Donald Kay can save them somehow when it comes time to prepare budgets and allocate money for salaries. They fought against the other candidate, Ruth Jacobs, because, among other things, she promised very little in the way of unrealistic future goodies.

She did promise to make needed fiscal cutbacks. And one of the byproducts of such trimmings would be money saved to provide for teachers' raises, within reason. In part, she lost because she bluntly painted a dismally accurate picture of what is on the immediate horizon.

After the election, boards throughout the county breathed deeply, stared at the heavens and said they would probably return to the battered electorate this coming March and attempt the same exercise all over again. They might not be able to.

Legislation is being prepared in Sacramento which would prevent these districts from spending more money per child than they already are. Proposed laws, already under discussion even as the new legislature gets ready to convene, would put a cap on an affluent district's ability to spend. In effect, there is a strong chance that many of the districts in this county will not be permitted to seek new funds in March. Tuesday's election could well have been their last gasp.

Still, there are no guarantees that, even if they could go again in March, such elections would be any more successful than Tuesday's. The margins of defeat, for the most part, appeared to be almost too great to overcome.

One administrator says he thinks that these districts ought to bite the proverbial bullet, forget about March and plunge ahead into what lies waiting just up the road: Cutbacks, economies, etc.

"It's inevitable," he says, "We might as well get on with it. Why wait? It's going to hit us sooner or later. Why prolong the agony? The faster we act the better. There is nothing certain about March, in more ways than one. We have to quit pretending that, somehow, things are going to be all right. They won't be. The old days are gone forever."

Indeed they seem to be.

Sources at the California Teachers Association in Burlingame predict that the impact of the landmark Serrano-Priest decision will be felt with growing intensity in the future.

That decision involves the way in which California allocates funds for public instruction on an unequal basis. That inequality ought to be overcome, say the courts.

We are headed irrevocably in that direction today. In all probability, there will be no turning back. Local schools are just going to have to learn to live with it, especially if the voters are going to refuse to come to their rescue.

100,000 Non-Voters Lose Registration

Nearly 100,000 San Mateo County registered voters who failed to go to the polls in this week's general election will have their names stricken frm the voter registration list.

State law provides that the names of persons who are registered voters, but who failed to vote, be removed from the registration list every two years following each general election.

County Clerk-Recorder Marvin Church reported that only 65.17 per cent of the county's 286,963 registered voters went to the polls in the Nov. 5 election.

Those who didn't will be receiving notices to be sent out Dec. 31 notifying them that their names are being removed from the registration list.

There is a saving measure, however. The envelope containing the removal notice also will contain a card which the recipient can fill out and return to the clerk's office to reinstute his or her registration.

A total of 187,026 San Mateo County residents voted in the general election, leaving 99,937 who will receive termination of registration notices.

City Hall Arbor Delayed Again

South San Francisco's long-awaited City Hall arbor was delayed again this week.

The arbor has been a campaign plank of at least two successful condidates at the last City Council race, as they sought to "do something" for the retired men who congregate at the City Hall grounds during the day.

Wednesday night, City Manager Ed Alario announced that plans and specifications were not ready. It involves construction of an arbor type structure, he said, with benches, new walkways, and refurbished rest rooms.

A last minute, unexplained, change in the plans forced the council to delay a call for bids for the project.

In other action, the council Wednesday:

Approved a use permit for J. C. Penney to establish a discount "Treasury" department store at the former White Front store.

Metric Day Set in Pacifica

The children of the Laguna Salada School District will have aa lunch of "metric" meat pizza, sugar "gram" cookies and orange "litre" freeze Nov. 14 as part of a scheduled "Metric Day."

Curriculum Consultant Harvey Barnett, who is heading up the program, said the purpose of the day is to "let students know that there is another easier system of measurement that every major country except the United States uses, and that we are now moving towards fuller use of this measurement system."

Barnett said the students will need to have a working knowledge of both our present system and the metric system.

Teachers will be asked to have a lesson dealing with the metric measurements during the school day.

A special workshop will be held for teachers Nov. 18 to explore the instruction techniques in the metric system.

Former Southwood Vice Principal

SSF District Child Welfare Head

Nick Crusick, vice principal of Southwood Junior High School for nine years, was appointed coordinator of child welfae and attendance, at Thursday night's meeting of the South San Francisco Unified School District Board.

Crusick received his bachelors and masters degrees at Colorado State College. He came to South San Francisco in 1958 and taught math at South San Francisco High until 1964 when he received his vice principal appointment.

Trustees also approved a cost-sharing formula for erecting a traffic signal at Ponderosa Road and El Camino Real. The state will pay 50 per cent of the cost, and the city and school district will each split the remaining cost.

The signal would provide for an entrance to South San Francisco High School from El Camino Real, and thus alleviate what has been a growing traffic problem. At present, Supt. Paul Nielsen noted, when school or a ball game are letting out, emergency vehicles cannot get to the school.

Valerie Lambertson, who was elected to the board Tuesday, joined the board Thursday but was not permitted to vote with the board. Her election will not be certified by the Secretary of State until Nov. 26.

Trustees discussed Mrs. Lambertson's proposal for reviving the Citizens Advisory Committee on School Finance which she had headed earlier this year. The committee studied means of economizing and set priorities in cutting services, if necessary. A special meeting may be set to consider the proposal of reviving the committee.

Trustees heard a report that, as of October, most minority students in the district are of Spanish descent. There are 2,195 such students, out of 13,260 enrollment. Other minorities included: Asian-American, 1,335; black, 409; American Indian, 50. More than 30 per cent of the students are minorities.

Trustees learned that the district would receive $105,486 from the federal government over the next three years to set up a Career Education Program at Westborough Junior High.

This includes $41,4[illegible] the district has received for this year; school officials were just notified that two more years' funds were assured.

Outreach Program Chairman Meets With Volunteers

John Sullivan, Community Service Librarian, met with library outreach volunteers last Tuesday, at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Vinton Stratton.

The Library Outreach Program serves library patrons who are unable to go to the library. It is a program designed to give the bedridden, the elderly, and the handicapped a chance to reach beyond their otherwise limited horizons and share the wealth of materials available in the Daly City Public Library system.

Volunteers working with library circulation material include Helen Stout, Marjorie Bowers, Modley Roberts, Ruth Fowler, Esther Hough, and coordinator Mike Stratton. Helen Stout, of Daly City, is the newest of the group and is well-qualified and experienced in working with library materials and with all ages of the community. She recently retired from teaching in South San Francisco.

The training session last Tuesday, conducted by John Sullivan and Mike Stratton, dealt with the scope of circulation materials available to outreach patrons, and with orientation of blind patrons to the Talking Books program. These "books" are made available for the blind by Library of Congress.

The Library Outreach Program serves a number of the convalescent hospitals and homes in Daly City. In addition, 23 patrons currently are served in their own homes by volunteers taking various library materials directly to them. Sixty percent of the users of the Outreach program are referred to the library by employes of the various social service organizations working in this area. Others are members of the community who request the service themselves.

John Sullivan, who directs this program, is finding that his work with these organizations, the Peninsula Library System, and the library volunteers is a challenging and rewarding experience. He stated while observing recently at the St. Francis Convalescent Hospital that "there are few experiences more moving in this business than to follow devoted volunteers while they are making their rounds."

From all reports, the Library Outreach Program is filling a growing need. Under Sullivan the program is expanding and improving its services. Equipment for the proam, which was funded originally by the federal government, has been purchased from a combination of federal and local library funds.

Although federal funds no longer underwrite the program, the communities of Daly City, Broadmoor, and Colma continue to be served by the Daly City Library system with the help of the 24 volunteers whose work includes serving as readers, researchers, drivers, repairmen and craft helpers.

Persons interested in becoming working members of this volunteer group are invited to telephone Mike Stratton, 755-6573, or John Sullivan, 992-2414.

HOLIDAY PARTY

Northern California Multiple Sclerosis Auxiliary recently held an Out Patients' Hallowe-en/Thanksgiving Party at the First Unitarian Church. Seen entertaining the luncheon guests are (from left) Cora and Santos, now appearing at the Westbury Hotel, and Auxiliary members Mmes. Murray H. Freedman of Daly City and Milton W. Schlemmer.

SSF Students Semifinalists

Principal Robert Keropian has announced that two students at El Camino High School have been named semifinalists in the competition for about 3,400 Merit Scholarships to be awarded in 1975.

These students are Beverly Claiborne and James Floyd.

The Merit Program Semifinalists were the highest scorers in each state on the 1973 Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude Test/National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Test (PSAT/NMSQT), administered to over one million students in about 178,000 schools nationwide.

The Semifinalists, most of whom will complete high school and enter college in 1975, will be identified to regionally accredited U.S. colleges and universities. Many semifinalists find this recognition useful in gaining admission to the college of their choice and in obtaining financial aid.

According to Edward C. Smith, president of the National Merit Scholarship Corporation (NMSC), "The approximately 15,000 Semifinalists represent the top one-half of one per cent of the nation's most academically talented young people. The students bring honor to themselves, their families, their teachers and their communities. Many of these students, those who make the best use of their ability to become productive at the high intellectual levels of which they are capable, will be future leaders in business, industry, and the professions."

Semifinalists must qualify as finalists to advance in the competition for Merit Scholarships. To become Merit Program Finalists, the semifinalists must be endorsed by their schools and recommended for scholarship consideration, confirm their high PSAT/NMSQT scores with an equivalent performance on a second examination (the SAT), provide evidence of high academic performance, and supply information about their other accomplishments. Over 90 per cent of the semifinalists are expected to become finalists.

Four El Camino Students Honored by Merit Program

Four seniors at El Camino High School have been named Merit Program Commended students by the National Merit Scholarship Corporation.

Principal Robert Keropian announced that the following students have received Letters of Commendation: Sally Heaney, Paul Miller, Susan Opp, and Sharon Ruble.

These students are among the 38,000 Commended students named on the basis of their high performance on the 1973 Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude Test/National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Test (PSAT NMSQT). Commended students are in the upper two per cent of those who are expected to graduate from high school in 1975.

Although the commended students ranked high on the PSAT NMSQT, their scores were just below those of the 15,000 Semifinalists who were announced in September by NMSC; commended students do not continue in the Merit Scholarship competition.

Edward C. Smith, president of NMSC, said: "The high standing of commended students in the Merit Program shows their great promise, and their attainment in this nationwide program deserves public recognition. The commended students should be encouraged to continue their education. Both these students and our nation will benefit from their further educational and personal development."

To increase their scholarship opportunities NMSC reports the commended students' names to the regionally accredited colleges they named as their first and second choices when they took the PSAT/NMSQT in October 1973. The reports include home addresses, test scores, and anticipated college major and career intentions of the Commended students.

NELL NORTON

What could be more fun for a recipe columnist than taking part in a recipe contest? The part taken was tasting and helping judge diet recipes created by members of Diet Workshop for their meeting in Westlake. Being an overweight recipe columnist made these recipes especially interesting to me.

I was welcomed by Barbara Schori, lecturer for this Workshop meeting, and then offered a plate to help myself to a large selection of attractive, delicious and "skinny" dishes. Each member of the class had created a recipe, made the dish and together we tasted and voted. Which was fortunate for me, for after tasting the recipes my impulse was to vote for every one. The winning entrees recipe for this group was a fish chowder.

Barbara informed me that recipe contests are going on at Diet Workshops all over the area and winning recipes will be compiled in a booklet for members.

JAN'S TOMATO FISH CHOWDER

- 1½ large 1½n large (46-ounces) cans tomato juice
- 1 large onion, sliced
- 2 cloves garlic
- 1 cup celery, sliced
- 2 Tablespoons parsley
- 1 teaspoon each, rosemary, thyme and bas l
- Dash cayenne
- 1 bottle (8-ounces) clam juice
- 1 can (about 14-ounces) chicken broth
- 1 pound turbot, cut in 1-inch pieces
- 1 can (4½-ounces) shrimp or use fresh shrimp
- 1 can (8-ounces) crab meat or use fresh crab
- Salt and pepper to taste
- Lemon wedges

Place the sixty-nine-ounces tomato juice, one sliced onion, two garlic cloves and one cup celery in large pot. Boil about 20 minutes or until tomato juice starts to thicken. Add the two tablespoons parsley and one teaspoon each rosemary, thyme and basil, dash of cayenne, eight-ounces clam juice and fourteen-ounces chicken broth. Simmer about 10 minutes. Add the one pound turbot, cut in pieces and cook 12 to 15 minutes until fish is flakey when prodded with a fork. Add the four and one-half ounces shrimp and eight-ounces crab. Salt and pepper to taste. Heat and serve with lemon-wedges.

As you can see from the ingredients, this makes a large pot of chowder. There were about 15 people at the Workshop meeting and we each had a cup and there was chowder left over. Adjust the recipe to your family's needs.

While this is a diet chowder, and for dieters the amount allowed is limited, it is so good that your whole family will enjoy it. Served with crusty French bread and a salad it is a complete meal.

In last weeks recipe for Crofter Casserole the size of tins of herring-listed was 32 ounces. Needless to say that was an error, the size of tin is three and one-fourth ounces (3¼).

Workshop on Early Childhood Education

A day-long workshop on "Early Childhood Education Programs" will be presented Nov. 16, on the College of San Mateo campus, 1700 West Hillsdale Blvd., in San Mateo.

The program is being offered to provide information to the public on early childhood programs now available in San Mateo County and as a workshop for persons involved in those programs.

The program will be offered, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., in the Little Theater, on the CSM campus. A fee of $5 includes luncheon and all workshop fees.

Eric Gattman, chairman of the CSM Department of Education, will be the program moderator. The keynote address will be presented by Glenn Davis, associate superintendent of public instruction, for the California State Department of Education.

Following the morning talks the program will resume with workshops on such subjects as "Use of Teacher Aides," "Parent Involvement and Parent Education," "Curriculum," "Multicultural Education, "Day Care/Child Advocate," "Advisory Board Committees" and "Body Movement in Childhood Development."

Dr. Edith M. Dowley, director of the Bing Nursery School at Stanford University, will present a film on Early Childhood Education in California.

The program is being cosponsored by the San Mateo County Office o. Education, the 17th District California PTA, Child Care Coordinating Council, Lawrence Childhood Center, Carey School and Fair Oaks Community Childhood Center.

Registration will be held at 8:30 a.m., Nov. 16, in the Little Theater or pre-register at the cashier's office.

Moscone, Papan Win

without a reduction of the present level of services or contributing to inflation."

Papan also said he expects one of the foremost concerns of the legislature to be in "satisfying" the Serrano-Priest decision, which in essence says a new way must be found to finance public education.

"California's concerns will be met head on," said Daly City Democrat Papan at his victory party in the Burlingame Plumbers Hall. He said he was "delighted with the clear mandate of the people" which he said indicated "the people want the government to act."

Papan also stressed that his recent involvement with the Southern Pacific rate battle is more than a "get elected" ploy.

"I think it is the corporate responsibility of the Southern Pacific to accept the fact that the movement of people is their concern as well as the public's concern," he said. "We're going after them all the way."

The incumbent winner was critical of his opponent's campaign. He said Rodli's thrust was "Watergate quality to mislead the voter," and suggested the legislature should "examine all candidates regardless of the party to present material calculated to mislead."

First-time challenger Rodli, on the other hand, indicated he was the victim of the nationwide Democratic sweep. "It was obvious there had to be an anti-Republican feeling. I gave it a good race and I have no regrets," he said.

Radical Causes

The student radical, like the football fan in a racoon coat and the campus goldfish swallowers is fading into folklore leaving a few wild-eyed and longed-haired wrecks looking for an audience.

As evidence of the reduction of /adicalism, let us turn to the "Spartan Daily" from San Jose State University. On Nov. 1, Marvin Kusumoto, the copy editor, wrote that during the recent campaign a crowd gathered to hear Houston Flournoy. The candidate, "like most politicians on the campaign trails," was late.

To fill the void "an old school radical with a portable bullhorn and the army surplus coat "gave an impromptu speech on the "ills of American society."

"It seemed quite obvious," Mr. Kusumoto reported, "that the interests of the crowd and that of the speaker didn't have very much common ground. There were catcalls and yawns while the speaker droned on and on."

Editor Kusumoto said it was "a new face, a different body, a different voice and yet the same words sounded exactly the same."

He said this speaker and another one appeared to the crowd as flipsides of a broken record. "Ho hum . . . What else is new."

The dwindling of radicalism does not mean that political apathy has seized the campuses or that a new wave of cynicism is on its way. Students are just as "turned on" as their elder brothers, but not w 'to the same old words over and over again."

The interests of the students, at San Jose State at least, is evidenced in their paper. They discuss such issues as the world food crisis, fire hazards, and traffic problems in San Jose, the status of womens studies and the rezoning of San Jose so IBM can establish a new plant.

ALONG WITH POLITICAL related subjects, the students express their interest in the state of music and art in our country. A table with religious material upon it has become a popular gathering point on more than one campus. Campus forums are as vital today as ever. So much so, in fact, that during the last campaign one reporter after another commented on the amount of time candidates spent on college campuses during the recent campaign.

Perhaps youth in the last half of the '70's will reach the ideals the dreamers set for it during the heyday of the radicals. Such ideals as those voiced by Kenneth Keniston in his book "Young Radicals."

". . . young men and women seek new forms of adulthood in which the principled dedication of youth to the betterment of society can be continued in adult work that does not require blind acceptance of the established system, but permits continuing commitment to social change.

"They seek a new orientation to the future, one that avoids the fixed tasks and defined lifeworks of the past in favor of an openness and acceptance of flux and uncertainty. In their openness, they stress not ends but means, not goals but style, not program but progress, not the attainment of utopia but a way of doing things.

"They seek new pathways of personal development wherein the openess of youth, its fluidity, growth, and change, its responsiveness to inner life and historical need, can be maintained throughout life.

"They seek new values for living, values that will fill the spiritual emptiness created by material affluence"

"They seek new ways of knowing . . . new ways of learning . . . new concepts of man in society . . . new formulations of the world . . . new types of social organization . . . new tactics of political action . . . new patterns of international relations" . . .

"Perhaps most important, they seek new controls of violence, whether between man and man or between nation and nation. Products of the violence-ridden post-modern world, more aware of man's inter potential for violence than any previous generation, their most constant effort is to put an end to the violence men do to each other, whether by racist oppression, hidden manipulation or open war."

November Is 'Home Month'

Believing that the family unit has a great influence upon American society, Mayor McRobert Stewart of Daly City has proclaimed November 1974 to be Strengthen The Home Month.

Mayor Stewart's proclamation calls for a mutual effort between the City of Daly City and the various religious, civic and educational organizations within the city to enable the family structure to continue to grow and develop. "I urge," the proclamation read, "all people to support these organizations and their programs to insure that the family unit will have the opportunity to be an asset to this country as it has always been in the past."

The Mayor's action followed a suggestion that was made by Scott Soulier of Daly City who said that Strengthen The Home Months have been proclaimed by many mayors including the Mayor of Oakland and by several governors including the Governors of Virginia and Utah.

He said that the suggestion grows out of a project known as Family Home Evening that was introduced by the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints and has been adopted by other denominations and has been fostered by clubs in many parts of the nation.

HOME MONTH

Daly City Junior Miss Pageant Set Dec. 1

The Daly City Junior Miss Pageant 1975, open to all local girls 16 through 18 who are high school seniors, will be held on Dec. 1.

The girl chosen to represent Daly City will go to the state finals in January in Santa Rosa. This is followed, in May, by a two week national pageant.

Regional director Anita Tager, in announcing the upcoming program, stressed, "It's not a beauty contest — there will be no bathing-suit competition."

Instead, the pageant is a nationwide program to recognize, reward, and encourage excellence in youth. Judging will be in youth fitness, creative and performing arts, scholastic achievement, poise and appearance, and in a personal interview with the judges.

There will be several scholarship awards on the local level. Statewide there is over $47,000 in scholarship funds with $10,000 being given to the California Junior Miss 1975.

Informational brochures are at each high school, or call Pam McNeil, Daly City's Jr. Miss 1974, at 992-1395.

'Land of Oz' to Open

The children's play, "The Marvelous Land of Oz" by L. Frank Baum, will open its two weekend run Friday evening at Oddstad Park Center, 1000 block of Crespi Drive (one mile east of coast highway) in Pacifica.

This will be the second production of the Pacifica Spindrift Players this season. Kathy McIntyre and Boyd Thompson are the co-directors.

This delightful fantasy, in a multi-media presentation features most of the well known 'Oz' characters. When the evil witch Mombi decides to turn Tip into a snowman, he runs off, with Jack Pumpkinheadl to the Emerald City, to warn the Scarecrow of the witch's practice of black magic.

At the same time, General Jinjur is ready to invade and take over the emerald city with her army of women. Into this picture enter the Tin Woodman and the highly educated Woggle Bug, who attempt to bring a peaceful solution to the activities.

The play is being staged with multiple settings, using the entire theater at Oddstad Center. Action will take place in and around the audience. A mime troup will set the stage, shift scenes and place the characters in action.

The cast includes Matthew McGuire, Brent Burgess and Joyce Van Horn as Tip, Jack Pumpkinhead and Mombi. Kevin Goodwin, Joe Vanek, Julie Miller, Erich and Phillip Rigling appear as the Solder, the Scarecrow, General Jinjur, the Tin Woodman and the Woggle Bug. Regina Pasden is Queen Ozma and Todd Heise, Elizabeth Baker and Basim Hilal are the Mouse King, Queen and Prince. The Mimes are Nancy Bernard and Gina Zito. The Army includes Stella Torvan, Wendy Hurst, Carolyn Burns, Jennifer Heath and Nancy Murphy.

Evening performances are at 7:30 p.m. on Nov. 15, 16, 22 and 23. Matinee performances are at 3 p.m. on Nov. 17 and 24.

Do you know Mrs. Jennie Aiello, Mrs. Lillian Bertucci, Mrs. Helen Corbett, Mrs. Gini Cyr, Mrs. Millie Dunow, Mrs. Vera Forte or Mrs. Lillie Franzoia? How about Mrs. Fran Gaffigan, Mrs. Mary Hansen, Mrs. Mae Heffron, Mrs. Carla Holl, Mrs. Virginia Hupf or Mrs. Pat Lindsay? Are they friends of yours?

All the aforementioned, along with Mrs. Toni Michels, Mrs. Alice Nappi, Mrs. Lydia Oates, Mrs. Angie Parenti, Mrs. Myrtle Peck, Mrs. Irene Pfisterer, Mrs. Martha Philipson, Mrs. Virginia Przyborowski, Mrs. Helen Scoville, Mrs. Mary Short, Mrs. Virginia Stanghellini, Mrs. Helen Vollert, Mrs. Margaret Watson and Mrs. Barbara Wiskotchill have been spending long hours over a period of months to create all the lovely boutique items which will go on sale tomorrow evening at the annual Christmas Boutique sponsored by the Mary's Help Hospital Guild.

The effort has been tremendous, and if you have friends who volunteer their time to the guild projects you will want to visit the boutique, either when it debuts tomorrow at 7 p.m. with a champagne party, or at some time during the following week to do a little holiday shopping.

Mrs. Lee Stringer, publicity chairwoman for the guild, reports that the selection of gift items is greater than ever before, and the ideas for home decorating are attractive and unique. In addition to the gifts and decorations, practically every member of the guild has donated baked goods, candies, jams or jellies to the sale! The hospital solarium should look like Santa's workshop tomorrow night, and Santa has agreed to be on hand to inspect the wares and give them his stamp of approval and pour champagne for shoppers.

The boutique is always a colorful, fun project and it has the admirable trait of serving a very good cause. Proceeds from the sale are used by the guild to help the hospital purchase materials or to provide funds for expansion programs.

At the height of all the activity involved with the sale, the guild members will take a short while to conduct "business as usual" at a general meeting planned Friday at noon in the auditorium on the ground floor of the hospital. Following the meeting the ladies will adjourn to the conference dining room for a buffet luncheon.

The tray favor workshop will begin at 10:30 a.m. and the board will meet at the same hour in the board room of the hospital. Workshop volunteers are asked to call Mrs. Hupf for information about the site of their session.

THE FUN YEARS of the '50s and '60s will be the theme of the Surprise Dance at Our Lady of Mercy Parish hall on Friday evening.

The parish committee has arranged for a midnight buffet, a dance contest and an award for the best "costume" reminiscent of the '50s and '60s.

Mrs. James Barnett, 755-5159, will accept calls for reservations. Tickets will cost $5 per couple.

ALVIN SCHWARZBACH, the chairman of the Northern District, Boy Scouts of America, has announced that this Saturday will be Good Turn Day for Scouts throughout the county, and to observe the occasion boys will be distributing and collecting bags of used clothing which will be turned over to an agency for refurbishing and redistribution to needy families.

SATURDAY, NOV. 16, will be the opening day of the Holy Angels Women's Guild Christmas Boutique.

Mrs. David Rushka, publicity chairwoman, indicates that the sale will open in the parish hall following the 5:30 p.m. Mass on Saturday and will continue on Sunday after all the Masses.

Mrs. Robert Simon, Mrs. Donald Powelson and Mrs. Charles Stuhr are chairing the event which will feature stocking stuffers, home baked items, terrariums and a large assortment of plants, as well as a wide selection of gifts.

Proceeds of the boutique will benefit the guild's scholarship fund.

MRS. HAROLD TONINI, chairwoman of the modeling committee for the Laces and Graces fashion show, has announced that Edward Morgan and Albert Teglia have agreed to take to the fashion runway and escort all the models as they appear in gowns and dresses representing American fashion trends during the past 100 years.

The show, being sponsored by the North Peninsula Circle Florence Crittenton Services, will be held in the California Golf Club in South San Francisco on Nov. 20.

TIME, TALENT and goods are needed by the members of the Holy Angels Latin Club as they prepare for their annual Christmas party for the children of Daly City.

Several hundred children are the guests of the club at the annual party and many willing hands have to be a part of the project if it is to be a success.

Anyone wishing to help or to make a contribution of any type is urged to call Mrs. Martha Ruiz, 994-0499.

MRS. LULU WILSON was the honored guest at a covered dish luncheon given by the Pacifica Fifty Plus Club yesterday.

The annual birthday party, honoring all members 90 years and older, is always given just prior to Mrs. Wilson's December birthday. While Mrs. Wilson is not the only member more than 90 years of age, she is the senior member of the seniors' group, and so she is singled out for a bit of special attention during the festivities, according to Mrs. Edna Laurel Calhan.

Former Stewardess Raps the Airlines

By RO LOGRIPPO

What's it like to lead the life of a sex object?

Ask any stewardess if you want to know, says Paula Kane, who blasts the airline industry for creating what she calls a false image of flight attendants through misleading advertisements like "fly me" and "we really move our tail for you."

Ms. Kane, who speaks from five years previous experience as an American Airlines stewardess, has recorded her attacks in a book entitled, "Sex Objects in the Sky." (Follett Publishing Co., $5.95.)

"I'm not entirely content with the title," the author admitted during a private interview this past week at the San Francisco hotel where she was staying. "I wanted the title to be 'Flying Geisha Girls,' but I conceded to my editors' wishes because I was more concerned with getting the message out."

The message, according to Ms. Kane, includes the assertion that the airlines have constructed an airborne fantasy world.

"The airlines have used stewardesses to create a flying dream machine so that male customers can indulge their sexual fantasies instead of feeling afraid or insecure while in the air," the author writes. "Almost lost in all the sexual innuendo of the Madison Avenue imagery," she adds, "is the primary reason why stewardesses are on board a plane which is to enforce safety regulations and supervise the immediate evacuation of the plane in the event of a crash."

To carry out this myth, Ms. Kane claims "stewardess colleges teach us how to think of ourselves as models or cocktail waitresses, totally self-absorbed in our makeup, our way of walking, our hairstyle. We are judged and evaluated on the job on the basis of our dress, our smiles and letters from satisfied customers."

The author adds that when she was in stewardess training in 1968 "about 20 per cent of the time was devoted to safety, and 80 per cent to grooming, etiquette and how to serve various meals."

The emphasis on "sex appeal" is what causes stewardesses to receive both verbal and physical abuse from passengers, Paula asserts, so much so that "it makes it difficult for them (stewardesses) to enforce even rudimentary discipline during the flight . . . It's shaping up as a giant battle of the sexes in the skies."

What aggravates the situation is the attire some stewardesses are made to wear, says Ms. Kane, who traces the glamour girl look back to 1966 when ad executive Mary Wells inspired Braniff Airlines to "end the plain plane" by decking out their flight personnel in garish Pucci prints. Other airlines soon followed and hot pants, miniskirts and other flashy costumes became standard uniforms for some flight attendants.

When the book "Coffee, Tea or Me?" cashed in on the new imagery in 1967, the sex object view of the stewardess was entrenched, Ms. Kane feels.

Although the author believes the airline industry does a fairly good job of convincing the public that stewardesses are "fluffy assembly line equipment," she denies that most stewardesses consider themselves as such.

"We stewardesses fail to live up to their expectations. We just don't fulfill the myth," she says because "many of us come from small-town conservative and even puritanical backgrounds. We are raised as the opposite of the myth of the cosmopolitan, sexually-free women that is a portion of the mythology, and we never succeed in playing that part of the role."

Even deeper than the problem of being touted as a sex object if you're a stewardess, Ms. Kane says, is the problem of coping with your employers' lack of respect for you. "In several areas the airlines display an incredible disregard for elementary safety," she writes. "They (the stewardesses) are seated in unsafe jump seats, in unsafe corners of the plane."

PAULA KANE
A personal account of the Stewardess Rebellion

As an example, Ms. Kane notes that on the Boeing 727-100, one stewardess seat is located in the galley which is surrounded by hundreds of pounds of kitchen equipment, that could easily break free from normally secure latches in an accident. Having worked the position which required her to sit there, the former flight attendant admitted she refused to do so even once when a Federal Aviation Agency inspector was aboard and could have cited her for it. She recalled, "I went up and asked him, 'what do you think of my not sitting in that jump seat? I don't have my padded suit and crash helmet on'." His reply to her was, "I don't blame you."

The reason these flight hazards prevail, according to Ms. Kane, is that "safety precautions cost money. Interiors must be designed to attract customers," she says, "not to be crashworthy. Stewards and stewardesses must be placed where no paying customer would want to sit."

Flight attendants are not the only ones who need worry when they're airborne, Ms. Kane says. Passengers have cause to be concerned too.

"Another example of negligence on the part of the airlines, is the type of material currently being used for cabin interiors," Ms. Kane writes. "Many of these new fabrics," she continues, "were designed to be noninflammable, but give off a dense black smoke containing deadly cyanide fumes."

Five years ago, the author continues, the FAA issued a notice of proposed rulemaking in order to "establish standards governing the smoke-emission characteristics of aircraft interior materials." The notice stated that "aircraft crashworthiness would be significantly upgraded if smoke emission from burning interior materials could be reduced in sufficient measure."

To date, Ms. Kane reports, no such rule has been issued although last year the FAA released information that cited four accidents in which cyanide was often present in the blood of victims in amounts that would be incapacitating and frequently fatal.

According to Ms. Kane, passengers and stewardesses have been exposed to doses of radiation on a single flight that far exceed what nuclear experts have established as the maximum safe exposure for a full year. "There is reason to believe," she says, "that doses of radioactive isotopes have had a particular effect on stewardesses, who spend some 900 hours a year in the plane cabins."

Ms. Kane further notes that ALPA has gathered evidence indicating stewardesses in certain cities have a much higher rate of miscarriages and deformed children as a result of this radiation exposure.

The former stewardess and nurse is so concerned about safety dangers aboard flights that she has accepted a volunteer job to research and compile information on the subject as a member of Stewardesses for Women's Rights.

'Sex Objects' React to Book

The accusations made about stewardess life by author Paula Kane in her new book, "Sex Objects in the Sky", brought mixed reactions from Bay Area flight attendants polled in an informal survey.

"I don't agree that the glamour girl stewardess image still exists," said one supervisor with American Airlines, the company which formerly employed Ms. Kane.

"It's inaccurate for the author to say 'this airline only spends 20 per cent training time teaching emergencies'," the same supervisor added explaining that "at least 40 percent of training deals with emergency procedures, the only part of training every attendant must pass in order to graduate.

Another stewardess with a commercial airline said she thinks the sex object image exists but that it isn't offensive to her. Three of her co-workers believe "the industry on the whole doesn't concentrate on playing up a sexy stewardess image."

None of the five stewardesses questioned from a local airline were upset about the recent publicity a PSA stewardess received following the publication of this month's Playboy magazine in which she is featured nude on the centerfold.

"I think anyone should have the right to do his or her own thing; I really don't think the story on the October "playmate" reflects on the stewardess' job she has," said one attendant.

An opposite viewpoint was expressed by a flight attendant with a charter airline.

"I think the image the Playboy story put forth is degrading to the whole airline industry," a World Airways attendant said. "Stewardesses don't have the respect now that they should have airborne as authority figures — this story just adds to our headaches."

Although the World stewardess said her company does not portray cabin attendants as glamour girls, she believes the attitudes of other carriers affect the idea of all passengers.

"The sexy ads may be the work of a minority of airlines," said another airline cabin attendant, "but it's the majority of stewardesses on all airlines who have to put up with the comments they generate."

As a former stewardess, even I have to agree with the last statement.

Conventions "Center" At Lehr's Steakery

Phil Lehr's Steakery is all set for an extra-busy week. The big California Academy of Family Physicians convention opens tomorrow, with the U.S. Savings & Loan League conventin to follow on Monday — and Phil has many cocktail and dinner parties booked in the Wellington Room during both events . . . Following the policy of years past, Vince's Italian and Seafood restaurant in San Mateo will not be open on Thanksgiving Day. The Licatas and their devoted restaurant staff will be enjoying the Holiday with their families. However, there is no time like the present to drop by for lunch, dinner, cocktails or a snack . . . Social and business occasions which demand a prestige locale will be satisfied in Scotty Campbell's, an atmospheric restaurant in Redwood City. Whether the occasion begins with predining fare or begins and ends in the lounge, you will be impressed with the total presentation . . . Early risers will be interested to know that Christopher's on Baldwin Avenue opens at 7 a.m. for breakfast service. The menu lists all the favorite eye openers, including eggs, omelettes, ham, bacon, sausage, pancakes, waffles, etc. After 11 a.m., the menu of hot, cold, and Italian Submarine sandwiches goes into effect. Patrons of this popular hof brau type restaurant may also enjoy their favorite beers and mixed cocktails.

Stickney's Flamingo Thanksgiving Day

Adrian Stickney's Flamingo restaurant in Palo Alto, which is open 24 hours a day, will be the only restaurant in the Stickney's chain open on Thanksgiving Day. A traditional Thanksgiving dinner will be served, as well as the regular menu. Employees of the other Stickney's restaurants, including Palo Alto's Shirt Tail, will be spending the Holiday with their families . . . Following a brief vacation, petite Norma Balagtas, Filipino star of films and television, will return to the Mabuhay Gardens Supper Club Wednesday night. The Four Jays will provide the back-up music for the vivacious songstress. Two floor shows nightly . . . Pizzas are the specialty of Enrico Romano, owner of Romano's Italian restaurant, located in Rockaway Beach, a picturesque area of Pacifica. Small, medium or extra large, Enrico will see that your pizza is exactly the one you like — light, fluffy and covered with all the ingredients that have made his pizzas famous throughout the Bay Area . . . Sixteen appelate court judges from 10 western states, conventioning in San Francisco, held a luncheon conference amidst the flowers and trees in Lehr's Greenhouse garden restaurant.

Peruvian Dishes for Torres Beach Diners

Peruvian dishes are a specialty at Torres Beach restaurant, in Montara (just south of Devil's Slide on Coast Highway One). This popular eatery, owned and operated by that industrious team of Frank and Fannie Torres, is known for these dishes, and they are prepared in such a way that they have yet to be duplicated by any other restaurant in California. With moderate weather temperatures holding out in Nevada, many fun seekers have been driving to the territory of casinos, fun and entertainment. When driving, be sure to drop by Nevada Tours in San Mateo and ask Kay about their Drive-Up Packages (also straight reservations) to South and North Lake Tahoe, Reno, Carson City and Las Vegas. Charters are also arranged. . . . One of the Wednesday-through-Sunday nightly features at Nick's in Rockaway Beach is the musical entertainment provided by the Steve Romano Combo. Dining, dancing, cocktails, and private parties are specialties here. The Moonraker, another Nick Gust restaurant success, is rated as one of the West's most nautical dinner houses. 9,000 Units Needed

Cheap Housing Shortage Here

By BOB HEMINGWAY

San Mateo County has a shortage of nearly 9,000 housing units affordable by low and moderate-income residents, and the prospect of finding a solution is not bright unless an extensive program to correct the problems is undertaken.

So states a revised version of the Initial Housing Plan, a document which is scheduled to become a part of the County General Plan.

The revised plan will be before the County Planning Commission next Wednesday at 1:30 p.m. for hearing.

In the plan, prepared by the County Planning Department, it is reported that a deficiency of 9,000 housing units affordable by households at or below the $6,000 income is a "conservative estimate."

The most serious housing problems are experienced by the large, low-income families of five or more persons, the elderly, the black, Spanish-speaking and other minorities, and the young, newly-formed families, the report says.

The report lists a total of 13 "obstacles" to the solution of the county's housing problems.

These include the county's very high land values, the high costs of construction, insufficient mortgage credit and high interest rates, lack of adequate commitment at the local, regional, state and federal level to solving problems of population growth, lack of funding for federal housing programs and "fragmented efforts to utilize what is available."

Also, it is noted, there is "continuing discrimination" on the basis of race and socio-economic level which is an obstacle to achieving the goals of the housing plan.

The report cites the failure of some owners, developers and real estate agents to abide by civil rights anti-discrimination legislation and the failure by some local, state and federal agencies to enforce that legislation as contributing to the problems of providing adequate housing for all.

In addition, the report says, there is the lack of involvement of low and moderate-income people in the decision-making process on housing matters.

The proposed "action programs" in the housing plan call for the County Board of Supervisors to set up the procedure for preparing a joint city-county community development and housing plan as a requirement for obtaining federal funds under the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974.

The plan also recommends that the Board of Supervisors:

- Organize a county agency to effectively coordinate long-term housing and community development activities.
- Establish a housing and community development citizens' committee to work with the staffs in order to develop recommendations and action programs.
- Continue to support environmental impact reporting procedures for impact of public projects on the quality of residential areas.

The report recommends that the Regional Planning Committee (RPC) establish a program aimed at the dispersion of low and moderate income housing throughout the county, rather than concentrating such units in existing low and moderate income areas.

Also, the RPC report says the RPC should develop a framework to determine responsibilities of each city and the county in providing low and moderate income housing for both families and the elderly.

Further, the report calls on the RPC to sponsor a program to bring together representatives of banks and lending agencies to establish techniques for increasing the amount of mortgage money available.

It is proposed that a cities-county task force (city manager, city planner and city engineer of each city, the county manager and the county planner) be organized to:

- Prepare an inventory of all available vacant public lands and recommend as to suitability for development of low and moderate income housing.
- Recommend revision of General Plan elements after evaluating major units of vacant or potentially reusable land.
- Investigate and prepare recommendations regarding the leasing of air rights over suitable publicly-owned facilities for development of low and moderate income housing.
- Recommend revisions to zoning ordinances to assure that zoning will be used in ways which encourage variety and mix in housing.
- Develop programs for adoption by cities and the county to encourage and assist sponsors and developers in preparing packages of federally subsidized moderate income housing to total at least 1,000 units annually.
- Develop 10-year plans to change the design of local streets and reduce through traffic in residential areas, and to improve storm drainage and sewer systems in residential areas.
- Set up a housing code subcommittee consisting of representatives of the Economic Opportunity Commission, the Division of Environmental Health and of city and county planning departments.

Other recommendations:

- The County Housing Authority should develop, with the aid of the RPC, proposals for authorization to construct of otherwise provide at least 1,000 units annually of low-income housing over a two-year period for both elderly and low-income families.
- The Housing Authority should prepare a long-range operational program to expand the amount of housing leased or owned by the authority to approximately 5,000 units over the next 10 years. (The authority presently owns 98 units and 725 leased units, with a waiting list of some 2,000 families.)
- The county and cities should urge the federal and state governments to provide adequate financial support for housing and community assistance and to develop and implement programs to assist local jurisdictions to maintain an adequate housing supply.
- Update and review the Housing Element every two years.

Board Boosts Fee

Supervisor Jean Fassler Wednesday warned County Manager M. D. Tarshes that this may be the last year she supports the hiring of an outside firm to deal with the county's employe relations and negotiations.

Her comment followed a 4-0 vote to boost from $40,000 to $55,000 a year the compensation to Industrial Employers and Distributors Association (IEDA), the agency which for three years has advised and assisted the county in its relations with employe organizations under The Myers-Milias-Brown Act.

Mrs. Fassler said, "There must be some progressive statewide program to train people within the framework of government and contract with firms when it is necessary rather than on-going."

"I emphatically believe that we get better quality of representation through IEDA," Tarshes responded. "If we develop expertise, we won't have the type of depth experience which we receive when we employe IEDA. An organization can do a better job for us if they're working with us throughout the year." "I'll vote on it this time, but I want an evaluation and overview before it comes back to us again," Mrs. Fassler said.

Tarshes said that besides leading the county's "intensive and complex negotiations with employe organizations, the IEDA staff has worked continuously during the year with the county management staff in providing consultation on a broad range of personnel matters and assistance in handling employe grievances."

In another matter, supervisors voted 3 to 1 to increase the responsibilities and pay for the county's legislative advocate firm, George Pottorff and Associates. Annual compensation will be $22,500.

About Ali-Foreman

Persons keep asking us what we thought of the George Foreman-Muhammad Ali fight, and how we had picked it. And why we didn't pick the winner in print before the fight took place.

The answers, in order:

We were not surprised as to the winner of the fight, but as to the manner of winning. We had felt that if Ali KO'd Foreman, it would have to be a technical KO due to cuts. We had never conceived of him actually knocking Foreman out. But then nothing Ali does surprises us any more.

We had privately picked Foreman to knock Ali out in about the seventh or eighth round. While we have never thought of Foreman as the most murderous puncher in the history of boxing, as some over-zealous "experts" have characterized him, we did feel that he punched too hard for the 32-year-old chin and legs of Ali. Obviously, we were wrong. But you must admit, we did pick the round.

We didn't pick the fight in print for obvious reasons. Quite simply, had we done so, we would have made a fool of ourselves, because we would have been almost 100 per cent wrong. As regular readers of this column know, we rarely make predictions on outcomes of games or boxing matches. It's too easy to lose. Especially when Muhammad Ali is involved.

HAS IT OCCURRED to you that there are suddenly no dominating teams in pro basketball? At least at the present.

Injuries and retirements have much to do with it, of course. Los Angeles has lost Jerry West to retirement, and that has hurt. Milwaukee has lost Kareem Abdul-Jabbar to injury and Oscar Robertson to retirement, and suddenly are very mediocre. Boston is struggling without the injured Dave Cowans. New York lost Willis Reed to injury and eventual retirement, Jerry Lucas and Dave DeBusschere to retirement, and as this is written, are struggling without Walt Frazier, out with an eye injury. Bill Bradley also had seriously contemplated retirement for a life of politics, but a combination of a lack of voters and, apparently, frenzied negotiations by the front office, saved the Knicks from losing their entire team.

Additionally, there has been no emergence of a new team as a power; not even Portland, whom many thought would become an instant powerhouse with the addition of Bill Walton. Not even Nate Thurmond has made the Bulls awesome, which some expected. (The reluctance to sign contracts of regulars Norm Van Lier and Bob Love also has something to do with it.

All of which makes the exciting young Warriors look awfully sweet, suddenly.

IF THE OUTRAGEOUSLY lop-sided scores in so many "major" college football games this year are the result of the seeming growing prestige of the national polls, if coaches are pouring it on just to move up notches toward that mythical national championship, then we think that that is very wrong.

If, on the other hand, these are legitimate scores, being registered by reserves as well as first stringers (it would also be wrong, morally and ethically, for a coach to instruct his third string to deliberately not score), then perhaps so-called big time football schedules should be realigned so that only the real powers play each other, thus eliminating such pitifully outgunned teams as Northwestern, for example, from such powerhouse leagues as the Big 10.

Some football coaches in the past have argued weakly that baseball managers in effect pour it on, because they never really stop trying to score even if they tally, say, nine runs in the first inning. They'll run it up to 15-20 if they can.

But baseball, of course, is different, because there is no time limit, because a game is truly never over until the last out is made, which therefore justifies every single run a manager can squeeze out of his team.

THOUGHTS THAT OCCUR:

Why is it that when a game ends in a tie, it's the favorite who was tied, but the underdog who got the tie? Or do you understand that question at all? Think about it.

Why is it that it takes years for a baseball player, or even to a lesser degree, a pro basketball player, to be called a "vet," but a pro football player is given the appellation in just his sophomore season in the game?

COUPLE OF WEEKS ago we went off on one of our annual tangents concerning modern football helmets, the gist of our thinking being that they cause more injuries than heads they save. Not long afterward, Clarence Santos, a South San Francisco reader, called to ask us if we knew who the Stanford quarterbacks were in 1935 and 1936 (if you're interested in winning some bar bets, it was Bill Paulman in '35, Earl Hoos in '36), and we began discussing football helmets, a subject in which the 62 year old Santos is very interested, since he used to play without one and still has all his marbles, including a couple of agates.

Santos, who played offensive and defensive end in high school football in Fresno during the days of leather helmets, wasn't your basic lineman at 5-3, 145 pounds, but he went all through high school and several years of semi-pro ball sans helmet ("They would always fall down over my eyes"), and his only injury was a broken nose.

IF YOU CAN stand baseball for a few lines, it's interesting to note that Randy Moffitt, despite being virtually inoperable, as they used to say at the White House, after the All-Star break last season because of illness and shoulder problems, still rated third among NL relief pitchers with 15 saves and five wins, putting him behind only Mike Marshall and Pedro Borbon. Now we know perhaps one reason why the Giants traded Elias Sosa away, even though Sosa was healthy all year. He finished recitively well down in the official rankings.

SOME INTERESTING things came out of the most recently released Warriors statistics, particularly if you use the Pacini Method (figuring game averages at increments of 48 minutes rather than just dividing points scored, rebounds, etc., by number of games played, without regard to how many minutes are played in each game).

Leading Warrior scorer, of course, is Rick Barry, averaging 39.8 points a game, but, surprise, Keith Wilkes is next at 22.2, followed by, surprise, Butch Beard (21.1), Charles Johnson (17.5), Cliff Ray — Surprise! 16.3, and then George Johnson (14.8) and Derr Dickey (12.9).

The versatile Barry also leads in assists (7.5), steals (4.2), has an 85.1 free throw percentage (actually, sort of bad for him) and 8.8 rebounds a game.

George Johnson is averaging 22.1 rebounds every 48 minutes, an exceptional five blocks, and a surprising field goal percentage of 53.5, while scoring 14.8 a game. Ray is averaging 16.1 rebounds, 2.8 blocks, a surprising 54.4 shooting percentage (Johnson and Ray weren't supposed to be shooters), and even more surprisingly, he's averaged 5.6 assists and 3.2 steals!

Other interesting random stats: Beard is averaging 6 assists, 1.9 steals, 50.5 from the field, 88.4 from the line; Charley Johnson is averaging 6 assists, 3.8 steals, 54.7 from the floor, 92.7 from the line; Wilkes is getting 11.5 rebounds, 2.1 steals; Dickey is averaging 13.2 rebounds.

Wanted — One road map out of South San Francisco and about 45 pair of sunglasses. Needed by November 28. Contact South City Warrior football coach Ray DeJong.

DeJong's gridiron charges, having played every game practice and league, this year at home at night, won the 1974 North Peninsula League championship in convincing fashion Friday night and also earned a spot in the first-annual NPL-Mid-Peninsula League Thanksgiving Day matchup at College of San Mateo.

The Warriors, who may cringe in fear at the sight of the big yellow fireball in the sky, have a two-game bulge with only stubborn Jefferson left on the regular schedule.

South City took care of nearest-rival Westmoor at Clifford Field last night, 35-0, and for those that had doubts, re-established the traditional Warrior running attack with a 235-yard outpouring from 10 different ballcarriers.

And, just to keep things balanced a bit, quarterback Frank Cesarz continued to pick apart opponents' pass defense with unerring accuracy. Cesarz only threw seven times but completed four for two touchdowns.

Cesarz, now a front-runner for Back of the Year, has thrown at least two touchdown passes in five of the six Warrior wins. His first toss last night was a three-yard Texas-Leaguer to Jim Selvitella. Three minutes before halftime he hit end Tony DeMattei from the 33 for the second TD.

Then with just 12 seconds left in the half Cesarz broke Westmoor's back with a one-yard quarterback sneak capping a 56-yard drive to make it 20-0 at intermission.

Westmoor had hoped to run right at the Warriors but got little chance to put the pre-game strategy into operation. The Rams had just 19 plays in the first half, rushed for just 21 yards and couldn't get its offense unfracked.

Tali Ena and Bob Luster, meanwhile, helped SSF maintain ball control throughout by splitting 153 yards. Jim Eckstein got his first league TD to open the second half on a 19-yarder, the score that enabled the subs to enter for mopping-up duties.

Jefferson 16, HMB 6

Jefferson totally and without exception dominated Half Moon Bay in the match-up of the two winless teams in the NPL. The Indians, who have lost their share of close, defense-geared games, didn't exactly explode but still managed to jump out of the conference cellar.

The Indian defense throttled the Cougar passing game without a completion and allowed just one HMB first down. The offense came through with 332 yards, its highest output of the year, and played virtually errorless ball.

Bob Petrone scored Jeff's first TD on a six-yard run but three minutes later Doug Bray intercepted a Mark Rudd aerial and ran 28 yards for HMB's lone score. When Rich Huertas ran over from the four with no time left in the third period it ended a frustrating string for the Indians.

Oceana 16, Serramonte 14

Al Ayers' 27-yard field goal with six minutes left in the game gave Oceana a mild upset over error-prone Serramonte. The game featured a bit of everything, touchdowns, safeties, field goals and some aerial antics.

The Regents built up a 14-7 halftime lead on Skip Campbell's two one-yard runs and a gang-tackle of Shark quarterback Lenny Sanchez in the end zone.

Oceana's Derrick Tucker picked up a loose ball on the 50 two minutes before the third period ended and raced in unmolested for the gap-closer and, after several punt exchanles, Ayers hit from the 17.

El Camino 17, Terra Nova 0

John Rico scored twice, once on offense and once on defense, to highlight El Camino's shutout over the Tigers last night. Rico opened the game snaring a 26-yarder from Gene Montgomery and picked off a Rich Stratfull pass in the third period for a 53-yard score.

Camino intercepted four Tiger passes and held TN to a minus five yards rushing, sacking Stratfull seven times.

South City back Tali Ena scores the Warriors' final touchdown on a seven-yard run in Friday night's 35-0 title-clinching win over Westmoor.

Serra's Big Win Hurt

Serra High's football team may have to attempt wrestling the West Catholic Athletic League title away from unbeaten Mitty next week with two key players missing.

The Padres whipped Bellarmine Friday night 40-3 in Santa Clara, as quarterback Jim Freitas and wide receiver John Caselli added considerably to already-impressive season totals.

But the Pads, who were already hurting after the loss of two-way lineman John Minahan, lost top tackle Matt Walter to an ankle injury against the Bells.

Running back Jim Walsh, who'd been out four weeks, returned to action long enough to pick up 46 yards in three carries and catch a 42-yard TD pass from Freitas.

The way Freitas was throwing, the Padre injury situation wasn't that noticeable.

"It was Jimmy's best game, and our best overall performance," said Pad coach Jess Freitas after his son had completed 14 of 21 passes for 266 yards and five touchdowns.

For the season the younger Freitas has completed 126 of 214 for 1,837 yards and 25 touchdowns.

Caselli, a 6-3, 185-pound senior, caught scoring passes of 29, 18 and 16yards, and got another tally on a six-yard reverse. He has 12 TD receptions for the season.

Freitas' other TD toss was a 26-yarder to Rich Allen.

Rick Garban led Serra rushers with 69 yards in 16 carries; the Padres ran up 137 yards on the ground, an unusually high total for the air-oriented team.

Meanwhile the defense, keyed by linebackers Brad Corsiglia and Mark Schon, held Bellarmine to 165 yards total.

Serra is now 3-1 in WCAL competition and 7-1 overall. Mitty is 4-0 and 8-0 after Friday nights' 14-9 win over St. Francis, the only team to beat Serra.

CSM Offense Missing Spark

By FRED BAER
Times Correspondent

Only cross-bay rival Chabot College stands between College of San Mateo and a second straight Golden Gate Conference football championship.

But the Bulldogs will have to find a bit more offensive spark than they did in Saturday's 7-4 win over City College of San Francisco if they expect to beat the explosive Gladiators Friday night in Hayward.

CSM's league-leading defense held the visiting Rams in check okay — allowing them just 30 net yards on the ground and 144 total. Problem was the Bulldogs totaled only 124 yards themselves on offense.

Barry Hyde's fumble recovery at the end of the first quarter led to the only score CSM needed, however. The Bulldogs drove 40 yards in eight plays, completing all three of their passes for the afternoon — the last to Steve Barnes for three yards and the score.

San Mateo quarterback Rudy Castellanos also threw completions to Bill Fass for 14 and seven yards to go three-for-three on the drive. But league total offense leader Castellanos missed 16 times during the rest of the game.

"We dropped passes and didn't execute well," noted CSM coach Steve Shafer, "But our defense played a great football game. We had two great goal line stands and Bill Poppin had a great hit in the end zone."

For the third time this season CSM gave the opponents the lead on a safety. After a punt put the Bulldogs on their own five, Castellanos was trapped in the end zone for a safety with 3:19 left in the first quarter.

San Francisco's only other points came on San Mateo's first punt attempt of the second half. Kevin McCoy couldn't handle a bad snap from his own 19 but managed to scoop the ball up in the end zone and get off a kick. However, it was blocked by Willie Nevels of CCSF and bounded out of the end zone for the second safety of the game.

McCoy still had the better of the battle with conference punting leader Gerald Rankin with nine good kicks for a 38.9 average to Rankin's 31.3.

San Mateo however, remained in its own territory most of the day and had to turn in two excellent goal line stands for the victory as four recovered fumbles gave the Rams several chances for the win.

CCSF had a first and goal at the Bulldog one late in the second quarter after a pass interference penalty and wound-up giving up the ball on downs at the two, as Poppin and Gregg Houts sandwiched the intended fourth down pass receiver.

San Francisco had a first-and-goal from the five in the fourth quarter and, after seeing passes broken up by Poppin and Houts, missed a 25-yard field goal try. Another fumble recovery gave the Rams one last chance from CSM 26. But Paul Kolesnikow stole his fifth pass interception of the year, a CSM record, to finally douse the fire.

With a 6-1 league record (7-2 overall) CSM leads San Jose (5-1, 7-1) and Chabot (4-1-1, 5-2-1) each by a half game but the latter pair have two games apiece left to San Mateo's one.

Trojan Harriers Beaten by a Point

Dual meet winner Monterey Peninsula College staved off the challenge of Skyline by a scant point Friday to win the Coast Conference Cross Country Finals and the overall league title.

Meanwhile College of San Mateo proved a gracious host in the championship — deciding final Golden Gate Conference meet, losing the third place battle with Chabot and De Anza, while West Valley topped San Jose CC for the title.

Monterey, running on its home Pebble Beach course, edged Skyline 40-41, to avoid sharing the title with the Trojans, who also finished second in duals because of a lone loss at Monterey in a September season opener.

Bob Powell was Skyline's leading finisher, in fifth place at 20:10 for the four miles.

CSM's top finisher, Damon Wood, ran 21:22 for fifth in his race and missed an all-league berth by just 16 seconds.

WRITING WORKSHOP

The Child Care Coordinating Council of San Mateo County will sponsor a workshop on proposal writing Wednesday evening, November 20, 7 p.m. to 10 p.m., at the United Methodist Church, El Camino Real and Howard Avenue in Burlingame. The workshop will be led by Mrs. Peter Abrahams (center) who is the founder and a faculty member of Common College in Woodside, and a consultant in program development to organizations. The workshop is open to the general public for a $5 fee which includes a copy of "A Guide to California Foundations." The workshop will be devoted to issues of program development and proposal writing. It will focus on philanthropical foundations in the San Francisco Bay Area and methods of researching foundations to discover ways to match foundation interests with program needs. To register, call the 4C Office, 344-4555. Shown with Abrahams are his students Dennis Dauland and Julia Cassar.

Terra Nova to Stage 'Easy Does It'

Terra Nova's drama department, under the direction of teacher David Campbell, will be presenting the comedy, "Easy Does It," on the evenings of Nov. 14, 15, and 16. Curtain time will be 8 p.m. Prices are $1.50 for adults and $1 with student body card.

The public is invited.

"Easy Does It" is filled with zany exploits, hilarious antics, and wild ideas follow fast and furiously throughout this comedy about the advertising world. It is set in the Creative Room where a flamboyant TV commercial writer, an alcoholic artist, a flippant Girl Friday, and their "beloved leader," the Creative Director, engage in a running feud with the new president of the company, an efficiency expert, the office boy and everyone else who dares to interfere with their offbeat rules of office conduct.

This small, local agency, having brought an unknown liquid detergent to prominence, finds itself being squeezed out by the new management who want to expand nationally and turn the account over to a big Madison Avenue agency.

Do-or-die competition ensues, culminating in the wildest promotion idea ever conceived.

The Tulsa Tribune called this play "An Uninhibited Hit!" in its premier performance at the Tulsa Little Theatre. When the play headed for Broadway, Alan Zwerding, editor of Backstage, said of it: "The funniest script I have ever read!"

Cast is as follows: Chris Hadley as Dan Pickell; Keith Leffler as Richard Dymer; Elaine Stows as Annalisa Fields; Orren Stiooler as Jay Bontrager; Rose Fremish as Molly Wilson; Jay Baker as Tony Ficken; Eddie Billick as Joe Hero; Arch McDermitt as Dan Morano; Alan Scott as Jim Hursh; Harrison Kendring as Grant Nilson; Gordan Day as Lance Rand; Agatha Little as Leslie Pearson; Beatrice Barnes as Terri Richardson; Edna Hurlbut as Janet Amezcua; Clubwomen as Nita Campillo; Cori Wilson; Shelly Thomas; Vicki Bohlender; Lyle Stancliffe as Blaine Mero; Doris Beeman as Donna Young, and Lt. Col. Morton Willing as Skip Perry.

DONATION

Rod Fields, branch manager of Western Federal Savings in the Bayhill Shopping Center hands a check for $25 to Mrs. Charles Thornton of the San Bruno Friendship Center. The money at the United Methodist Church in San Bruno. The center is an arm of the County Mental Health Society.

Ten Black Girls Vie For Grant

Ten black girls will be vying for the title of the first Miss Black Skyline at a pageant to be held Friday at 8 p.m. in the Skyline College gymnasium.

A dance featuring the band "Non-Stop Ltd." and a fashion show will be included in the festivities. Donations are $2 in advance and $2.50 at the door for this Black Student Union Sponsored event.

Proceeds from this pageant will go to a scholarship fund to be used by a black Skyline student transferring to a four year college. The award will be based on grade point average, community activities, and an interview.

Judging of the girls will be done by local celebrities. BSU advisor Arnett Caviel said the contestants will be judged on "grade point average, poise, and their involvement in uplifting the black race."

The winner will be "someone we perceive as being an all-around example of a black student," Caviel stated.

Modern day fashions which are currently popular with the college set will be modeled by BSU members and other campus club members. They will model clothes from local merchants along with selections from their personal wardrobes.

Luncheon Slated to Aid Local Musicians

A musical luncheon, with four different groups performing, is scheduled for noon on Saturday, at Mills High School to help raise funds to send 130 of the school's musicians to Hawaii.

Seating at the luncheon is limited to 175 people. Tickets are on sale for $3 with $2 of the amount going into the student salesman's trip fund, according to co-chairwomen Barbara Stevens and Dorothy Trapanese.

The Mills musicians have been invited to participate in the fourth annual Hawaiian Festival of Music to be held March 24-31 in Waikiki Shell of Kapiolani Park, Honolulu.

Mills is one of about 25 high schools in the United States that auditioned and qualified for the trip. All expenses for the trip will be paid by fund-raising activities; no school or tax monies will be spent.

At the luncheon, the Bel Canto singers, string ensemble, barber shop quartet and majorette spirit leaders will perform. The luncheon, put on the the Ladies Luncheon League, will feature nationally advertised foods.

Door prizes, including food delicacies, also will be awarded.

Tickets may be obtained by telephoning Mills High School and leaving a name and telephone number. A music student-salesman will return the call as soon as possible.

Terra Nova High's Backpacking Club

By LAURA DEL ROSSO
Campus Correspondent

Students at Terra Nova High often complain that the school clubs are dull and inactive. But the one club at Terra Nova which is perhaps the most active is the Backpacking Club.

Members take trips to various parks with their backpacking equipment during the weekends and vacations.

Last year the club consisted of about 30 students who went on three trips during the year. Two of the trips were for weekends and one was a five day trek into the Ventana Wilderness; a trip which was plagued by unexpected snow. But in general the trips went well and club members enjoyed themselves, as can be seen by the club's membership, which has now jumped to 50 students.

The club already has taken one trip this school year, Nov. 2-3, to Henry Coe State Park in Santa Clara County. A few problems arose before the trip, causing some members' disappointment. The club had to set a 20 person limit on the trip, which left 30 students behind. So 20 students with seniority were selected to go.

The club already is planning another trip, this one to Pt. Reyes National Seashore sometime in the future, a trip in which all members hopefully can participate.

The club's advisors are Carolyn DeYoung, school nurse, and James Johnston, biology teacher.

Coastal Access on Agenda

Access, or the lack of it, to coastal recreation areas is the subject of the seventh of nine plan elements of the developing Coastal Plan being put together for this region by the Central Coast Regional Coastal Zone Conservation Commission.

"Transportation" will be taken up by the regional commission at a series of public hearings starting Tuesday at 8 p.m. at Seaside City Hall in Monterey County.

The staff has offered a series of findings and policy recommendations which basically would restrict coastal highway improvements to handle recreational traffic without acting as a magnet for developers, provide bicycle and walking trails to be used as substitutes for automobiles, cut down auto traffic, pollution and parking by providing new or expanded public transit facilities to recreational areas, expand the coastal scenic corridor system, restrict coastal airport developments to demonstrated basic necessities, encourage more rail transportation, restrict auto access to delicate environmental areas and dovetail land use with available transit alternatives and road capacities.

Appeal Over Aide's Demotion

The former chief psychiatrist at San Mateo County's North County Mental Health Center in Daly City complained to the County Civil Service Commission Thursday that he was demoted after filing a grievance because he was ordered to assume administrative duties.

Dr. Jorge Werbin testified that he was chief psychiatrist at the center two months ago when Dr. Floyd Wylie, named center chief in July, ordered Werbin to assume seven administrative duties in addition to his counseling services.

Werbin said that he declined because he was heavily involved in counseling services to members of the Latino community. He said that there was "no communication" with Wylie when he attempted to discuss the matter.

Werbin stated that he filed a grievance with Dr. John Visher, chief of the Mental Services Division of the County Department of Health and Welfare, through the Union of American Physicians Oct. 7, charging intimidation by Wylie.

He was subsequently notified by Wylie on Oct. 15 that unless he assumed the administrative duties he would be demoted, Werbin said. The psychiatrist testified that he was notified Oct. 21 that he was being demoted to staff psychiatrist.

Tom Bond, a representative of the Union of American Physicians, contended before the commission hearing that the demotion was a "retaliatory move" against Werbin for filing the grievance.

Visher, Wylie and Dr. George Pickett, head of the Department of Health and Welfare, denied the allegation.

Senior Citizens at Skyline

Nelder to Keynote Conference

San Francisco Supervisor Al Nelder will keynote the first Senior Citizens' Conference at Skyline College in San Bruno Nov. 21, in the College's Main Theater, speaking on the subject of "Crime Prevention for Seniors."

The address by the former police chief will set the theme for the all day meeting which is being jointly sponsored by Community Services Office of Skyline College. San Mateo County Senior Forum, San Mateo County Parks and Recreation Department and the Associated Students of Skyline College.

Nelder, who spent 29 years on the San Francisco police force before being appointed chief, became famous for transferring more policemen to the streets for active crime-fighting by replacing desk-bound officers with civilian personnel. He also was one of the first chiefs in the country to use policemen dressed as women to decoy purse snatchers.

The North San Mateo County Crime Prevention Unit will also present a brief program featuring the film "Neighborhood Watch." In addition their Mobile Security Unit will be on display in the main theater lobby throughout the day. It includes such devices as dead bolt locks, rim and pad locks, and hasps as well as four different types of alarms, varying in price range.

Other security exhibits including Phone-Care, fire detection systems, intrusion detection systems are being provided by private companies.

Additional participants in the conference include Skyline President John Petersen, Bernice Neilson, president of the San Mateo County Senior Forum, and David Marin, community services director, and Tony Perez, president of the Associated Students.

Olive Melody of the Fun-After-50 club will sing the national anthem. The Skyline College Jazz Band will give a 45-minute presentation under the direction of Billy Robinson.

The program begins at 9 a.m. in the foyer of the main theater, admission is free. There will be a luncheon served in the cafeteria at a cost of $1.50. Senior Citizens must buy luncheon tickets in advance.

For details, call John Sherwin at 364-5600, extension 2486 or Beverly Brice at 355-3764.

SSF May Buy Land For Park

South San Francisco city councilmen are considering buying a 20½-acre portion of bare land next to the site of the city's future Sign Hill Park.

The offer was made last Wednesday night by real estate dealer John R. Penna, acting in behalf of an unnamed developer.

Penna is offering the land for $75,000 — a per acre price of $3,750. The land, he said, could be developed into 80 lots which would be valued at $800,000 for single family home sites.

The land is on the bay side of Sign Hill, and is bounded by Ash Avenue.

The offer was referred to the city's Park and Recreation Commission. Councilman Warren Steinkamp noted that there are plenty of public and private funds available to purchase open land. Bette Higgins, local conservationist, suggested using part of the $100,000 reserved from the Proposition 1 funds for Sign Hill.

Because of its gentle slope, Penna said, it would be the only part of the future Sign Hill Park available for picnicking.

'Odessa File' Director's Rebuttal

The transfer from book to film of Frederick Forsyth's powerful "Odessa File" which opened the San Francisco Film Festival and is currently playing on the Peninsula has stirred dissatisfaction more than controversy. But its director, Ronald Neame, explained the problem of visualizing the novel and hoped that his film "makes the statement I had in mind that the danger of Nazism still exists."

"I received complete cooperation from the German officials and we shot on location in Hamburg, Munich and around Germany. They do not resent nor are they sensitive about the Third Reich. They are frank and open about it as a deplorable part of their history," he said.

"There are no extras in the rally scene of ex-Wehrmacht soldiers. I advertised for ex-German Army men and got 1,000 replies out of which we chose 300. They're dentists, doctors, scientists, and all speak English.

"They treated our film as an interesting experiment in bringing it up now. They are quite worried about the growing surge of neo-Nazism in Germany. Talk with the students and they'll tell you the Third Reich could happen again. 'We Germans need a strong leader, we like being told what to do,' they told us.

"I think Russia was right in keeping Germany divided. The last thing I'd have expected was the American Nazi party demonstrating on our premiere night in San Francisco. Even I thought it was part of our publicity campaign and hadn't been informed of it. But it wasn't."

His point about making major changes in the story concerns Forsyth's writing style, one that does not develop characterization without lengthy discourse into their backgrounds of the characters.

"The trouble with Freddy is that he gives at least 10 to 15 pages of background on each character, even into his birth and background. You understand their point of view, what makes them tick. Consequently, when they get onto the screen, there is no way of developing them except by what they do and say.

"We filmmakers are always criticized for not being true to the book but it should be understood we make a film based on what is in the novel, not the novel itself.

"I produced "Great Expectations' with David Lean and Dickens wrote all characters in dialogue. All you have to do is to eliminate certain sections and take his God-given dialogue, trim a bit and you have a lovely, well-rounded character.

"After all, he wrote to give public readings.

Festival: A 'Trifle Tedious'

By ROBERT BURMISTER

Friday night's "Bach to Bach" offering by the San Francisco Fall Symphony Orchestra at the Palace of Fine Arts was a trifle tedious for most of its length.

Conductor Karl Richter had a way of throttling the freedom of the musical phrases from their inception. That, combined with proscenium draperies that tended to gobble up what sound came their way, left the music without much bite. And one thing that J.S. Bach's writing can certainly be said is musical teeth.

The concluding Brandenburg Concerto No. 1 was Richter's most successful bout with the composer, and in a bout of that sort, if one man wins, they both win. Richter at last managed to capture some of the sense of musical flow that the previous selections had lacked under his baton. He let the instruments sing their music more, and he let up a bit on the stringently compact phrasing that had dominated the earlier works in the program.

Even so, Richter did not bring out the counterpoint especially, but kept the instrumental lines more or less as one big homogeneous blob. Too, he took some strangely graceless retards:

any inner-motivated feeling from music. Beyond that, though, he did achieve good balance in the orchestra, especially in playing off the French horns against the lighter reed woodwinds, and in surrounding concertmaster Stuart Canin's nocturnal solo passages with sensitive orchestral transitions.

The Brandenburg No. 2 was a different story, however. Except for the second movement concertino of flautist Paul Renzi, oboist Marc Lifschey and violinist Canin, the piece sounded mechanical in the extreme.

Trumpet soloist Laurie McGaw had a bad night and he knew it, so there's no point in belaboring the point. The Bach trumpet is such a small instrument that every hesitation and flub stand grossly exposed; ther's no way to mask problems. Bach trumpetist at his disposal and wrote accordingly, much to the chagrin of later generations of trumpet players. They are faced with somewhat the same problem as coloratura sopranos who are saddled with mastering an F above high C simply because Mozart's sister-in-law could sing it easily.

Richter was solist in the Bach D Minor Harpsichord Concerto, which he conducted from the keyboard. He maintained good control over the orchestra through the piece, helped no doubt by string players who knew their music very well.

The third movement was the most successful. Richter gave the music considerable vitality and his cadenza was quite exciting. He managed very good textural variety from his harpsichord during the cadenza and mastered the complexities of the music's chordal counterpoint cleanly and with good focus.

The Overture to Lucio Silla by Johann Christian Bach opened the program. It is an early and simple example of the symphony, a form which soon became extraordinarily complex in its execution. To pass it off merely as pleasant would do the work an injustice. The first movement development section, for instance, is modest in size but dramatic in harmonic contrasts. The second movement Adagio is quite serene in its simplicity and the pizzicato section of the third movement is most absorbing Mateus Rose' Wine will be the Perfect Host to the Pork Chops or the Manor House Fryers that are featured this week. This wine should be chilled approximately three hours before serving. Mateus Rose' is a refreshing wine---light and soft and not tart.

Professor Honored

A former instructor of science education of the College of Notre Dame, Belmont, and department chairman of science at Serra High School, San Mateo, has been honored in the State of Washington.

He is Dr. David R. Stronck, associate professor of education and biological sciences at Washington Stae University.

At the annual meeting of the Washington Science Teachers Association, Dr. Stronck received the award of "Outstanding College Science Teacher for the Year 1974" given "for his outstanding contributions and services to the young people of the state and to the profession of science education," the Washington State News Services says.

Attendant Is Beaten

A 24-year-old attendant at a service station at Willow and Middlefield Roads in Menlo Park was beaten so badly by four robbers as he was closing Wednesday night he had to be taken to Stanford Hospital for emergency treatment.

Tony Foggiato reported to Menlo Park police that four blacks, about 18 to 20, entered the station at 9:45 p.m. and beat him up before leaving with $54. Foggiato was released after emergency treatment.

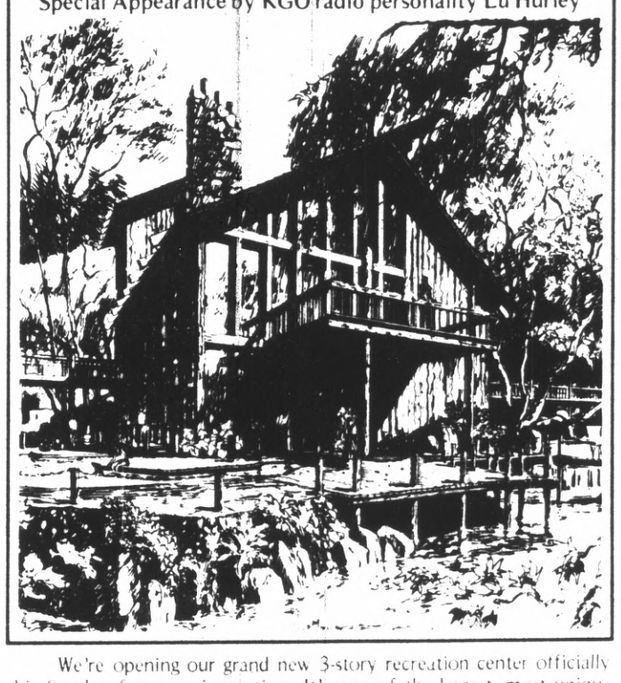
OPENING GRAND

NOVEMBER 17 - NOON TO 3 PM

Special Appearance by KGO radio personality Lu Hurley



We're opening our grand new 3-story recreation center officially this Sunday for your inspection. It's one of the largest, most unique apartment recreation facilities in the San Francisco area.... 7,200 square feet of pure luxury. With features like an outdoor pool that flows through a warm "air curtain" to the spacious interior, a jacuzzi whirlpool set in front of an open, 35-foot wood burning fireplace, so you can swim and relax in any kind of weather. Lounges, billiard room, gymnasium, saunas, kitchen and outdoor barbeque areas... all uniquely able to fill your own leisure requirements.

Come down this Sunday to see for yourself and maybe you'll win one of the fabulous door prizes to be given away by Lu Hurley.

And if the refreshments, the new recreation center and Lu Hurley aren't enough to make your afternoon grand, take a look at one of our eleven different floor plans, our lighted tennis courts and our 24-hour security system.

You see, the only thing we don't have is you.
